Sunday Menu Meatless For Many

By The Associated Press

Sunday dinner meant things like macaroni, tuna fish or maybe vegetable casseroles for thousands of American families who joined the start of a week-long meat boycott aimed at cutting rising food prices.

The boycott went on despite newly imposed price ceilings on beef, pork and lamb. Many consumers said President Nixon's action to limit the cost of these items didn't come soon enough to help

"Nixon is too little, too late," said Charles Weaver of San Antonio, Tex., a senior systems engineer for a computer company

Mrs. Weaver, who said she spends about $35 a week on food for herself, her husband and their two young daughters, said she has been cutting down on meat for some time and would participate in the April 1-7 boycott launched by a variety of consumer groups

"We're using a lot of fish," she said. "We dropped coffee when it went up and we can do without beef "

Saturday dinner was tuna burgers for the Weavers; Sunday was tuna tacos. In addition, Mrs. Weaver said, she's making such main courses as eggplant casseroles, cheese dishes and eggs. She said she saves about $1 a meal by cutting out meat.

Faye Giordano of Brooklyn, N.Y., said Sunday's dinner for her and her husband, a traffic manager for a trucking company, was macaroni instead of roast beef. She said that during the week, "We'll have soups and omelets, macaroni, ravioli. We'll go back to the Italian way." Mrs. Giordano said her normal food budget is between $50 and $60 a week.

The boycott emphasis was on beef and other high-priced meats. Many families turned to chicken and other low-priced poultry items.

Some consumers said they wouldn't actually buy any meat this week, but would use some they had bought in advance, on sale, and stored in the freezer.

Ruth Francis of Philalphia said, "Most of the meat (for this week) will come from my freezer. I don't plan to go out and buy any meat. One of our meals will be ground meat and sometime during the week I'll serve creamed chicken and one night I plan a tuna casserole ... Saturday we usually have pizzas."

Mrs. Francis, whose husband George earns $11,000 a year as a production manager for Lutheran Publications, said she used to try to keep the monthly food budget for a family of six — including four boys, aged 11 to 21 — to $150. "Now," she said, "it is almost $200 a month."

Two meat dealers in Reno, Nev., reported that a lot of their customers who planned to join the buying boycott had stocked up ahead of time

Charles Bradley, the meat manager at the California Avenue Market, said sales last week were "heavier than usual." Kenneth Bell of the meat department at Les' Meat Block, said "quite a few" of his customers planned to participate in the boycott, but "some of them are buying up ahead of time." He said he had cut down his orders for the current week "just in case."

Emily Dillon of Albany, N.Y., said she would use meat she had in her freezer, but would not buy any more because of sympathy with the boycott She said her two daughters were married and noted that she had only her husband and herself to cook for, but added:

"I've been in the stores and if I were feeding a family, I don't know what I'd do. I'd hide rather than face the family with what I could probably afford to give them."

The price ceiling took effect Thursday, enforcement by the Internal Revenue Service begins on Monday; and retailers must post ceiling prices by April 9 It involves only processors, wholesalers and retailers, and does not affect the farmer or cattleman.

The National Farmers Organization, however, has opposed both the ceiling and the boycott. NFO members withheld livestock from market for several days last week to counter temporarily declining prices.

NFO President Oren Lee Staley said a series of farmers' meetings had been called this week to "maintain a vigilant alert to any future tampering with the markets."

Dolly Cole, wife of the president of General Motors, was sympathetic to the farmers' complaints. "I'm not going to boycott meat," she said, "because I figure everyone has to make a living Meat is not the only thing in the country that has gone up So has labor The farmer has his cross to bear also "

Mrs Cole said she does her own shopping and cooking Sunday dinner, she said was leftover rump roast made into hash I like hash," she said

Among the consumer organizations sponsoring the boycott was FIT — Fight Inflation Together started by two California women

Dorothy Van Horn, a FIT leader in Minnesota, said her family of three was starting boycott week with walleye pike "We're also going to have some tuna dishes and I'm going to get out my cookbooks This is going to be a re-education of my cooking methods."

Schmit Feels His Bills Will Cut Drug Traffic

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

A quietly determined 43-year-old farmer who gets up at 3 30 a m is batting four for four in this legislative session s continuing veto duel with Gov J James Exon

Four times the governor has struck down drug control bills coaxed through the Unicameral by Sen. Loran Schmit.

And four times Schmit has gathered the 30 votes required to override Exon s wishes

"Because of those bills " Schmit believes "there will be less traffic in drugs next year than would have been the case without them "

The bills provide the State Patrol with 10 additional drug investigators, three legal counsels and a new supply of cash to make undercover drug purchases, all at a cost of about $327,000.

Knowing the governor s aversion to having someone tap the till, " Schmit noted in a Statehouse interview "I looked for a method to raise a generous amount of new money to pay for the costs "

Schmit settled on a proposal to raise the pari-mutuel horse race betting tax rate an additional percent and rode that bill across the legislative finish line

It will raise $120,000 this fiscal year and another $911,000 for the coming year, the Bellwood farmer noted, easily paying the costs of his drug bills with plenty to spare

When the governor s drug control vetoes arrived (Exon contended that the Patrol already had sufficient funding to do the job) Schmit said, "only a few senators wavered and flipped "

Sen. Loran Schmit

Most of his colleagues " thought I was right," he noted. "They had been properly convinced that this damn thing has to be stopped

(Exon "probably didn't work too hard to sustain his vetoes either," Schmit believes, because "he earlier told me he favored a stepped-up drug program.")

His concern with drugs is personal as well as legislative. Schmit admits He has 10 children, three of them in college

"It is very obvious to me that kids can obtain drugs very easily," he said.

"There is an element of people who say drugs are not dangerous. But they are dangerous in the same way that a gun is dangerous and a knife is dangerous and speed on the highway is dangerous."

They lead to broken families and, Schmit said, contribute to social problems such as crime, welfare costs and public medical and rehabilitation expenditures.

His pending proposal to stiffen drug pentalties will attempt to "differentiate between the person who sells a marijuana cigarette to a friend and those who try to make a business out of it," he said

Schmit said he also distinguishes between marijuana and hard drugs.

"I've gone back and forth about marijuana," he noted. "I don't want to chase kids around over a marijuana cigarette.

"Some kids are going to puff a marijuana cigarette once or twice to try it out and may never do it again.

"My concern is that it can lead to other things. There are plenty of cases where kids went on to other drugs "

What Schmit wants to control, he said, is "the people who are pushing heroin and cocaine and other hard drugs. They are subhuman."

Although he "grew up around it," Schmit says he has never tried marijuana himself "I've sprayed acres of it though."

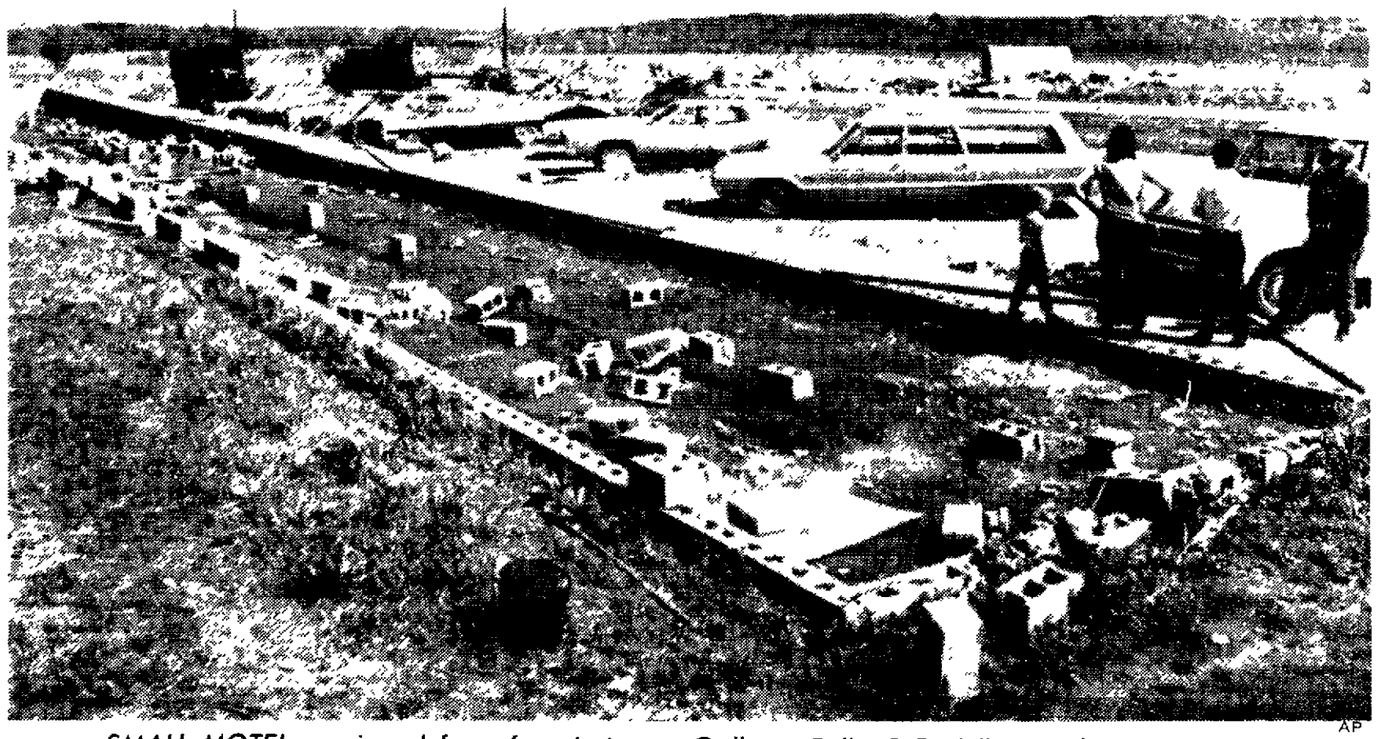

Schmit is a commercial helicopter pilot who sprays fields and crops for hire

"During the summer season when I'm in the air, it doesn't take more than 15 minutes before that helicopter flushes out someone harvesting marijuana," Schmit said

Thus, another Schmit bill: providing the Patrol with a helicopter for drug surveillance.

"I think we have the support of the people to spend whatever is necessary to get at drugs," he said

Although his bills did not have the support of the governor or the official blessing of the Patrol, Schmit said, "the troopers were supporting me."

Twisters Belt Georgia, South Carolina

By The Associated Press

Tornadoes killed at least eight persons in South Carolina and Georgia over the weekend, while a twister tore apart a shopping center and injured several dozen persons near Washington, D.C., on Sunday.

The National Weather Service reported flooding in widespread areas of the nation, including "a serious flood situation" after heavy rains in Missouri and Illinois

The tornadoes in South Carolina and Georgia Saturday left hundreds injured and uprooted a motel, tossing it across a highway.

On Sunday afternoon, tornado-type winds and heavy rains swept across Northern Virginia, causing more than 30 injuries and inflicting heavy property damage.

"We do have injuries; we do have damage," said an officer in the Fairfax County Police Department after a tornado passed through the county just a few miles west of Washington, D.C

One person, Robert Hoffman, 24, of Washington, was in critical condition with a back injury

The heaviest tornado damage came Saturday night in Abbeville and Calhoun Falls, S C., where six died. The Calhoun Falls Motel was thrown across a highway, killing two men.

"It looks like some strong person picked it up and threw it across the road and splintered it up," said Ray Monroe, a Calhoun Falls resident.

Georgia Gov Jimmy Carter said the tornadoes, which struck Saturday night and early Sunday, caused damage estimated at $50 million to $100 million He said an estimated 5,000 persons were left homeless in the state and 250 were injured Some 1,000 homes were damaged, he said.

Carter surveyed the stricken area from a helicopter Sunday and said he planned to seek emergency federal assistance He said the storm was the worst natural disaster the state has suffered in terms of financial loss

The tornadoes struck with capricious aim One family s mobile home was overturned and destroyed, their car parked adjacent to the trailer was untouched

The storms killed six persons in South Carolina — four from Abbeville and two from Calhoun Falls near the Georgia border

Authorities said the two from Georgia were killed as tornadoes touched down in Monroe and Athens

Meanwhile, the weather appeared about to deal another blow to Southern states as major flooding was developing on five North Carolina rivers and central Florida was under a tornado watch In addition, the Pee Dee River at Cheraw S C was expected to crest at about 15 feet over flood stage Sunday night

The forecast office in Columbia S C said the Yadkin-Pee Dee River in North and South Carolina was rising with the heaviest flooding in many years Flooding was reported developing near Bewlett N C , where the Rocky and Yadkin merge to from the Pee Dee

The Rocky River at Norwood N C , was about 23 feet over flood stage Sunday morning according to the National Weather Service The flood waters were the result of Saturday's heavy rains

There were no details of fatalities in South Carolina caused by the tornadoes but officials said one of the dead was a child, killed near Abbeville

Traffic Violations Decrease For DIS Participants

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The number of traffic violations for those who have been directed to attend Driver Improvement School (DIS) since the program began nearly five years ago has dropped 80% according to figures

Municipal Court Chief Probation Officer Robert Keller said that the average number of violations per person attending DIS is 3.9 with an average of about two violations per year since most of those directed to attend the school are young drivers who have been driving only about two to three years.

Keller said that follow-up studies show that the average number of violations per year has dropped to one-third a violation for those individuals who have taken the four-week course

The school requires that the individuals attend a two-hour session one evening a week for four consecutive weeks, according to Henry Cox, who has been in charge of sessions for about a year and a half

"Trust and confidence" are the keys, Cox says, noting that everyone makes mistakes

However, these young people between 18 and 24 who are most frequently directed by the court to attend DIS need to know "why and how" these mistakes happen and the consequences of having these mistakes on one's driving record, Cox points out.

He said that by having the judges, probation officers and law enforcement officers included in these sessions, the class participants have the opportunity to see as people those individuals who may have been involved with their court appearances and subsequent attendance at the school

The young people are given an opportunity to ask questions and discuss matters they may feel are unjust or unfair, Cox explains, and "rap sessions" or "hassle groups" are held on the last two meetings

"We try to show them that there are rules, regulations and people who care and people who are willing to help," Cox said, noting that the major problem is a general misunderstanding of the system.

Through the "rap sessions" and establishing a trust and confidence with these young people, "most of the kids leave with a good attitude," he added

Keller said that the program, which has been financed by Federal Highway Safety Funds since its inception and which has gained national recognition, is a program of attitudes.

He said that figures compiled by Municipal Judge Thomas McManus reveal that 68% of the traffic offenders in Lincoln Municipal Court are 25 years of age or younger.

For this reason, Keller notes, the DIS program has concentrated on the young driver with the hope that attitudes about driving and the consequences of violations may be improved.

For the first four years of the program ending June 30, 1972, a total of 970 persons completed DIS and it is estimated that an additional 500 will complete the program this year based on current figures

In addition to a judge, probation officer and police officers who participate in the sessions, a driver education instructor, an officer from the State Patrol and possibly an insurance representative or official from the State Motor Vehicle Dept are used as resource persons for the classes.

Keller said they try to keep the classes at 30 persons with a maximum of 40 persons.

Prior to 1969 a person could be directed to attend DIS only as a part of the terms of probation, however, the 1969 Legislature passed a law whereby the court may order DIS if the judge feels it is necessary or helpful to an individual in addition to the fine or sentence which may be imposed for a traffic violation

If the person fails to attend the school, he may face a contempt of court citation

Last POWs Come Home

By The Associated Press

A final wave of Operation Homecoming flights brought 69 repatriated POWs to joyous family reunions in their homeland Sunday as the last known American prisoner of the Indochina war was freed.

The release of Army Capt Robert T White 32, of Newport News, Va , from a Mekong Delta jungle signaled the end of direct U S involvement in the longest war in the nation's history

A festive crowd estimated by Travis Air Force Base, Calif police at 6,200 jammed the flight line to welcome 15 Americans and a Canadian missionary

Air Force Lt Col Louis H Bernascon of Napa, Calif. wept freely after a brief speech to the throng and a kiss from his mother and 14-year-old daughter

"To all of you a sincere thanks from the bottom of our hearts for all the letters you have written, all your concerns, all your prayers," Bernascon told the cheering, flag-waving crowd "God bless each and every one of you, our Commander-in-Chief and the United States of America," he added

The crowd then sang "God Bless America "

More than 100 residents from Bernascon's nearby hometown unfurled banners and waved signs for the standout athlete and former president of his high school and junior college classes

Other flights landed at Andrews AFB, Md , Sheppard AFB, Tex , and March AFB , Calif , and Scott AFB Ill

A festive crowd estimated by Travis Air Force Base, Calif. police at 6,200 jammed the flight line to welcome 15 Americans and a Canadian missionary.

Air Force Lt. Col. Louis H. Bernasconi of Napa, Calif. wept freely after a brief speech to the throng and a kiss from his mother and 14-year-old daughter.

"To all of you a sincere thanks from the bottom of our hearts for all the letters you have written, all your concerns, all your prayers," Bernasconi told the cheering, flag-waving crowd. "God bless each and every one of you, our Commander-in-Chief and the United States of America," he added.

The crowd then sang "God Bless America."

More than 100 residents from Bernasconi's nearby hometown unfurled banners and waved signs for the standout athlete and former president of his high school and junior college classes.

Other flights landed at Andrews AFB, Md., Sheppard AFB, Tex., and March AFB., Calif., and Scott AFB, Ill.

Vietnam Chief Arrives For Summit With Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon received last-minute briefings from aides Sunday as South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu sped across the Pacific for summit talks at Nixon's "House of Peace."

Thieu arrived at Los Angeles International Airport aboard a chartered jetliner that he christened "Cooperation in Peace."

The phrase, painted in both Vietnamese and English on the Boeing 707, set the tone for the two days of talks in Nixon's office at the Western White House, and at his home, which Nixon calls the "House of Peace."

Thieu is to be greeted with full military honors when he arrives at San Clemente at midmorning Monday for his first face-to-face meeting with Nixon in nearly four years.

In advance of the start of the summit talks, Nixon conferred Sunday with his top foreign affairs adviser, Henry Kissinger, and with other aides.

Thieu also set aside Sunday evening for conferences with his advisers at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles, where he is making his headquarters.

A group of demonstrators led by activist Tom Hayden and his wife, actress Jane Fonda, planned to march to the gate of the Western White House Monday at about the same time Thieu arrives by helicopter.

The demonstrators oppose further U.S. aid to Thieu and his Saigon government, but sources said Nixon was ready to assure the South Vietnamese leader that he has his moral and economic support in the postcease-fire era.

Thieu also is reportedly seeking a specific guarantee from Nixon that the United States would intervene militarily should North Vietnam blatantly violate the cease-fire agreement.

Discussion of this request is the anticipated local point of the two days of talks, which officials said they expct to be blunt and wide-ranging.

After the summit session concludes with the issuance of a communique Tuesday, Thieu plans to visit Balboa Naval Hospital in nearby San Diego.

Many hospital patients are casualties of the United States' decade-long involvement in the Vietnam war — involvement which officially ended last week with the release of the last U.S. prisoners of war and the withdrawal of the last U.S. military forces.

The summit will have a social side, too.

The President will give a black-tie dinner for Thieu at his home Monday night, and Thieu will reciprocate by being host for a a poolside luncheon Tuesday. On Tuesday night, California Gov. Ronald Reagan will give a black-tie dinner in Thieu's honor at a Beverly Hills hotel.

Thieu is scheduled to fly to Washington on Wednesday for talks with members of Congress and administration officials. He plans to visit Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson at the LBJ Ranch in Texas on Saturday, then leave the United States for stops in Italy, Great Britain, South Korea and Taiwan before returning to Saigon.

THIEU . . . trying to shed tyrant image.

Thieu Hopes To Improve His Image

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu has launched an image-building campaign to persuade the South Vietnamese people and the world that he's not a tyrant.

Few doubt Thieu wants to remain in power, or that he will. Though he lacks popular support, particularly in the central and northern provinces, political observers say nobody else is strong enough to challenge him as long as U.S. dollars continue to back him.

"He is still regarded as the man who stood up to the Americans and managed to get a better cease-fire agreement, although not a perfect one," said an American source. "He's a man who is not considered an American puppet, which is an advantage to him and to us."

Since the cease-fire Jan. 28, Thieu has taken to the hustings to promote his Democracy party. He flew to the Mekong Delta city of Can Tho to tout his land-to-the-tiller program of turning over land to the farmers who work it.

Last week, he freed Truong Dinh Dzu from Saigon's notorious Chi Hoa prison. Dzu, who ran a surprising second to the Thieu-Ky ticket in the 1967 presidential election, was imprisoned for suggesting peace talks with the Viet Cong.

Critics had been demanding his freedom and the move was seen as part of Thieu's campaign to make himself look good and head off antiwar protests by American opponents of his regime.

But supporters contend Thieu has been unjustly maligned and misunderstood. They say he is good at face-to-face encounters and hope this will help him pick up political and economic support during his trip to the United States, Great Britain, Italy, South Korea and Taiwan.

Some say he and President Nixon have a lot in common: their middle class backgrounds, their isolation from critics, their political shrewdness and their policy of never moving unless they're sure of winning.

"He's not a malevolent or a malicious person," said an observer. "He may be elusive but he's a brave man. His personal courage is never questioned. When he wants to, he can be quite charming. He could have done much more to improve his image because he comes across very well.

"He's a highly intelligent man — lots of smarts — and his personal life is unblemished. There are no dark chambers in the basement. He's not a Papa Doc. Thieu is a man of intelligence but caution. He thinks over every alternative many, many times."

Thieu, who will celebrate his 50th birthday Thursday in Washington, was born in Ninh Thuan Province on the south central coast of Vietnam. He was youngest of the five children of a small landowner.

He attended a Roman Catholic secondary school in the former imperial capital of Hue and worked in his father's rice fields during Japanese occupation in World War II.

With defeat of the Japanese and the return of French colonial rulers, Thieu joined the tough movement of the Viet Minh, a national liberation movement led by Ho Chi Minh who went on to become president of North Vietnam.

"I was deceived by them for several months," Thieu has said. "By August of 1946 I knew that the Viet Minh were Communists. ... From that moment on, I have been fighting communism."

By 1954, when the French withdrew and Vietnam was divided, Thieu was a colonel. He served four years as superintendent of the National Military Academy and attended the Command College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and a weaponry school at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Thieu gained command of a division under dictator Ngo Dinh Diem, and he led its tanks against the presidential palace in the November 1963 coup that overthrew Diem. With characteristic caution, Thieu waited for other commanders to strike before sending his troops in.

After Diem's assassination, Thieu was promoted to general, but kept one of the lowest profiles among Saigon's new military leaders. Quietly, he gathered support for the showdown against swashbuckling Nguyen Cao Ky that thrust him into the presidency on Sept. 3, 1967.

Since then he has survived political storms and military crises and weathered charges of rigged elections and dictator-type rule by decree.

Thieu was accused of political opportunism for converting to Roman Catholicism during Diem's regime. But he denied that he converted because Diem was a Catholic. He said conversion fulfilled a promise to his wife's Catholic family made when he married in 1951.

Thieu's daughter, Tuan Anh, 18, was married two months ago to the son of the president of Air Vietnam, the nation's flag carrier. The newlyweds are headed for the University of Pittsburgh where both will be students. Thieu's son Loc, 12, studies in Switzerland.

2 Missionaries Burned

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Communist troops burned to death two American women missionaries when they were captured five months ago in Laos, according to a Canadian missionary captured with them.

Evelyn Anderson, 25, and Beatrice Kosin, 35, were tied to a post and burned alive in a grass hut, his account said. When the women's charred bodies were found a few days later in ruins at the village of Kengkok in Southern Laos, their hands were tied behind their backs.

The Canadian, Lloyd Oppel, 20, of British Columbia, was reported to have told the story to his escort officer, who related it to Canadian-born Shirley Jones, wife of a civilian employe here. Mrs. Jones relayed this account to newsmen:

"Mr. Oppel, the two women and another man (Samuel A. Mattix, 29) were captured when the Viet Cong took the village.

"They tied the two women up in a nipa (thatched grass) hut and set fire to it. The women were still alive and were tied to poles."

Miss Anderson, from Quincy, Mich., and Miss Kosin, of Fort Washakie, Wyo., represented the Christian Missions of Many Lands. Nine other missionaries narrowly escaped capture in the raid on Kengkok village.

Oppel told newsmen he would make no statement until he gets back to Canada. He boarded a hospital plane Sunday bound for the U.S. Naval Hospital in Bremerton, Wash. Mattix left Saturday for the same hospital.

Mattix is from Centralia, Wash.

Mrs. Jones said she did not know why the Communists spared the lives of Oppel and Mattix.

Oppel appeared strained and weak as he talked with Mrs. Jones and others in the crowd here to bid farewell to the last group of departing POWs.

He posed for photographers holding both a Canadian and an American flag, and said: "I have been treated like a brother here. I would like to say thank you and God bless America."

'Morrison Not As Conservative As Public Thinks'

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Frank Morrison was not as conservative a governor as most Nebraskans think, according to the view of two contemporary Democratic Party historians.

"Nebraskans have tended to regard the Morrison years as conservative and consolidating, an interpretation which does not do justice to the governor's record," a new book on Nebraska Democratic politics suggests.

"On balance, more substantial changes were made in state government during the Morrison administration than in any of the other administrations between World War II and the present."

The book, "Shall the People Rule?"

The authors: James Pedersen and Kenneth Wald, both recent graduates of the University of Nebraska who wrote the 450-page book at the behest of the Nebraska Democratic Party.

MORRISON . . . "more substantial changes made."

Pedersen is currently a student at Harvard Law School. Wald is pursuing a post-graduate degree in political science in Washington University of St. Louis.

Party Since 1854

The book explores the political growth of the state and the role of the Democratic Party from 1854 to 1972.

It chronicles the activities of such past leaders as J. Sterling Morton, William Jennings Bryan, Gilbert Hitchcock and Charles Bryan, concluding with a look at Gov. J. James Exon midway through his first term in office.

"While Governor Exon has relied on urbanites and organized labor for electoral strength, his appeals to them are reminiscent of the pre-Roosevelt Democratic governors," the book concludes.

Although some observers suggested in 1970 that the gubernatorial race between Republican Gov. Norbert Tiemann and Exon seemed to be "a case of confused identities," with Tiemann acting more like an activist Democrat and Exon appearing to be more of a conservative Republican, the description is not apt, the authors suggest.

EXON . . . "traditional ideology."

". . . Exon and his stress on efficient, limited and economical government was quite consistent with the Democratic tradition," they wrote.

'Limited Government'

"Candidate Exon thus represented the traditional ideology of Nebraska Democrats, with its faith in decentralization and limited government," rather the more activist national party image fostered by Franklin Roosevelt in the New Deal years.

"The New Deal philosophy itself never developed among most of the party membership" in Nebraska, the authros noted.

Exon, Morrison and the late Ralph Brooks were the three Democratic governors elected in modern times. Together, the three of them won five of the last six gubernatorial elections in the state.

Brooks did it first, in 1958, when Democrats were finally able to break 18 years of virtual Republican domination in the state.

Terry Helped

And he did it, the authors pointed out, with the invaluable assistance of State Sen. Terry Carpenter, who campaigned against the re-election bid of the late Republican Gov. Victor Anderson, slashing at the incumbent's record on tax enforcement.

"Carpenter, as it turned out, provided the necessary catalyst to turn grumbling at Anderson into voting against him,"

BROOKS . . . "effectiveness suffered" from his poor health.

Pedersen and Wald wrote.

". . . in that hairbreadth finish, there is little doubt that Terry Carpenter and his personal campaign against Anderson made the difference."

Troubled by health problems, Brooks' effectiveness "suffered badly" during the year and a half of his governorship, the book states. He died Sept. 9, 1960.

"His death cut short what could have been a very important public career based upon his excellence in the contemporary version of stump speaking," the authors said.

Morrison was elected in 1960, and subsequently won re-election to two additional two-year terms.

". . . it remains something of a puzzle why so many people should perceive Morrison as a proponent of laissez-faire government," Pedersen and Wald wrote.

"The oddity is probably caused in part by the nature of the Morrison reforms, which were in the main administrative, unspectacular and not accompanied by sweeping publicity."

However, the authors caution, "the 'activist' interpretation of Morrison's tenure should not be taken to mean that all of the significant innovations had the governor's support, involved his participation, derived from his authority or were originated in his office."

Nevertheless, they said, the record includes abolition of the Board of Control and new executive direction of state institutions; reorganization in personnel management, and revised procedures for handling executive budgeting and accounting.

During the Morrison years, the state established a medical care program, a state employes retirement system, the first water resources study program, a statewide educational television system and "the first comprehensive building plan for the state university at Lincoln."

"Road-building, general aid to education and resource development went on at an expanded rate," the authors said.

"The former McCook resident was anything but the bare-minimum public service governor that he has sometimes been made out to be.

"While he shared the traditional low-tax views held by nearly every one of his Democratic predecessors in office, he also had some of the activist governmental conceptions of the Populist governors."

In an informal conversation with Wald in 1971, the authors said, Sen. Richard Marvel, chairman of the Legislature's Appropriations Committee, "agreed that the Morrison administration effected far more change than its 'liberal' Republican successor."

Twiddle Thumbs To Banish Pain

SHANGHAI (AP) — Just twiddling your thumbs is the newest Chinese way to banish pain during surgery.

For 1½ hours the other day, a pretty young actress smiled and talked and showed no signs of pain while surgeons cut open her throat to remove a cancer of the thyroid gland.

The only anesthetic she received was continuous pressure on the so-called "snuff box" area near the base of each thumb. This is a hollow at the back of the hand near the webbing between thumb and forefinger. It became so named in former times when it was a convenient place to put tobacco snuff to sniff.

The snuff box is one favorite site to insert acupuncture needles to produce surgical anesthesia. The needles then are twirled by hand or vibrated electrically.

Now the Chinese say the needles can sometimes be eliminated altogether through what they call pressure acupuncture, the application of pressure to some of the acupuncture points where needles are ordinarily used.

The surgery over, a great bandage around her throat, Mrs. Ho stood up, politely asked some visitors to take good wishes to the American people, then walked to her room in the Hua Shan teaching hospital of the First Shanghai Medical School.

She said through an interpreter that it hadn't hurt. So did other patients undergoing a variety of operations under regular needle acupuncture observed by a small group of Americans concerned with health and medicine during a 22-day visit to major medical centers in the People's Republic of China.

It was firmly said acupuncture does not work for everyone. Usually we heard that 20 to 30 per cent of patients are selected for it.

While psychological factors, including faith and reassurance, may well be involved, the psychological factors do not explain animal experiments we saw. One rabbit, for example, was able to tolerate a painful stimulus of heat beamed at its nose longer under acupuncture than without it. The rabbit was scarcely influenced by the thoughts of Chairman Mao.

Acupuncture for minor or major physical ailments has been practiced in China for some 5,000 years.

But acupuncture applied to make people immune to pain during surgery was quite new when it came along in China about 1965 or earlier. How could it work?

Chinese physicians and scientists say frankly they don't know how acupuncture anesthesia does what it does.

But in very serious and often elaborate and precise research, they are trying to make scientific sense of the phenomenon.

What adds interest to the experiments with pressure acupuncture as in Mrs. Ho's case, is that physical pressure involves special nerve centers located in your muscles.

Known as proprioceptors, these centers react to pressure, stretching or vibrating to tell you where you are in space, where your arms and legs are and what's happening to them. Nerve signals are flashed to your brain carrying this information.

A theory being advanced here is that acupuncture needles pushed into muscular tissue, activate either the proprioceptors or points near them to generate nerve signals.

But in the case of acupuncture, the nerve signals actuated this way are said to interact with or block and inhibit the nerve signals coming from places where surgery is causing pain.

This hypothesis is being explored at the Institute of Physiology in Shanghai.

Muskie Lashes Bill That He Claims Seeks To Silence Dissent

FROSTBURG, Md. (AP) — Two U.S. senators have introduced, virtually unnoticed, a bill backed by the Nixon administration that seeks to silence dissent within the federal government while hiding its incompetence and misbehavior, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said Sunday.

The bill sponsored by Sens. Roman Hruska, R-Neb., and John L. McClellan, D-Ark., was formally introduced Wednesday. An aide to Hruska said it was a Nixon administration proposal.

Muskie said the measure "would create staggering penalties for disclosure of information even when the information is totally misclassified or classified only to prevent public knowledge of waste, error, dishonesty or corruption."

Existing laws already provide for punishment when secrets are disclosed "with intent to damage America and its security," Muskie said. "But this new law would go farther. It would prohibit and penalize disclosure of any classified information, regardless of whether or not it damaged security."

The bill also provides for punishing newsmen and officials of their broadcasting companies or publications who participated in making the information public, Musie said.

Penalties of three to seven years in jail and a fine of $25,000 to $50,000 "would be imposed on actions which are not now considered crimes, which are, instead, the applauded work of investigative journalists," Muskie said.

Muskie also, attacked the entire classification process, claiming that much more information is classified than is necessary.

For example, Muskie said, in 1960 the Pentagon "was classifying all information that showed we were using monkeys in space" because of "someone's concern that it might damage our relationships with India, where some religious sects worship monkeys."

But at that same time, he said, "a sign in front of a monkey cage in the National Zoo explained that the monkey on display was a research animal who had traveled into space in American rockets."

Introducing our new BankMark.

COLOR

To better communicate our identity to you, both visually and verbally, we have adopted a new identification program.

The key visual element is our new and unique BankMark, which incorporates in its design the first two initials, FN, of the bank's name. Progressive, innovative and ever-expanding as well as technical, precise and accurate, the design symbolizes characteristics of the bank which we consider are important to you and to our future growth.

The uniqueness of the mark however, is the optical effect it creates — making it quickly recognizable and therefore an effective tool in linking our various methods of communication.

Another significant part of the new identification program is the bank's name. To communicate it more simply both visually and verbally, we have shortened it to First National Lincoln. The type style in which the name visually appears is also unique to complement the BankMark in imparting positive identification.

The third basic element of the new program is color. A dark blue was selected as the primary color that will be used by the bank. However, a whole family of compatible colors will also be used for specific purposes.

Effectively uniting and coordinating all of our methods of communication to help you more quickly identify the progressive programs and services we offer — that's the object of our new identification program.

IN PERSPECTIVE

(Mr. Dobler is out of the city on business. His column will be resumed Tuesday, April 3).

By C. L. SULZBERGER

TOKYO — It would appear from a lengthy conversation with Premier Kakuei Tanaka that Japan's current foreign policy is founded on American security guarantees, Chinese friendship and a relationship with Russia where economic potential is mitigated by political coolness. When assessing the views expressed by the present chief of government it is notable that Western Europe doesn't figure large on his horizon.

Tanaka acknowledges there is a national debate on neutralism versus the United States treaty tie but dismisses advocates of the former theory as relatively unimportant. Were their ideas ever to prevail, he says, communism would be developed as an alternative to the present system and "the only logical result would be to divide Japan like Vietnam."

While conceding that this country relies for protection on the U.S. Seventh Fleet plus ultimate nuclear deterrents, he argues it is unreasonable to expect Japan to pay for this in the way West Germany does by offset contributions for American military support in Europe. "That would merely strengthen the argument of those who wish to abrogate the bilateral security treaty," he contends. "We are not Germany. We have no Berlin Wall staring us in the face."

Moreover, he continues, Japan has no desire to become a military power once again. World War II was the first conflict the Japanese ever lost and they are unuse to the "European game" of "sometimes winning, sometimes losing."

Therefore great resentment exists against the mere thought of recreating serious armed strength, apart from modest self-defense forces. "Nobody," he says, "could win an election on the issue of constiutional revision to permit greater military power."

With this in mind, he insists, there is no fundamental difference between Tokyo and Washington and no contradiction in their views on China and Russia. He adds: "not a single Japanese diplomatic action is taken on these matters without prior consultation and agreement with the United States." (This apparent lack of resentment at the so-called "Nixon shocks" is not shared by all Tanaka's cabinet, notably Foreign Trade Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone).

With respect to China, a country toward which Japan feels a guilt complex and whose culture is viewed as Rome once viewed that of Athens, the premier is convinced Peking has no aspiration for super power status. He says: "that is what they told President Nixon and what they subsequently told me.

"Moreover, one-third of China's long frontier with Russia and India is restless and undefined. The Chinese population is rising at perhaps 2 per cent annually. Yet the gross national product is only half of Japan's. Therefore they must concentrate on internal development. If China had truly wanted to be a global super power it would not have encouraged the North Vietnamese to end their war."

Tokyo welcomes China's support in the Japanese dispute with Russia over territory seized by Moscow in 1945. Four small islands in the Kuriles are claimed by Japan. Tanaka says not only that Peking endorses this claim but that its press has written the entire Kuriles group should be handed back, something not even Tokyo has asked for.

The premier contends the Soviet government has not changed its attitude on this matter since 1957 when it offered to return two of the islands if Japan would agree to negotiate the status of the other two. He could not possibly "go back 15 years" on the issue he insists. Therefore it would be difficult for him to visit Moscow at this time as suggested by the Kremlin.

To summarize, Tanaka seems to place great reliance on continued U.S. understanding and support and also to hope for developing Chinese sympathy and diplomatic backing. Toward the U.S.S.R his attitude seems to be dichotomic.

On the one hand he obviously desires an arrangement that would open to booming Japan new and relatively continguous energy sources. On the other hand, he prefers political coolness until the territorial question is resolved.

KING KNIXON

Will Activists Rule?

Efforts by the Federal Communications Commission in the area of television broadcasting continue to be made. In testimony recently before a congressional subcommittee the FCC discussed changes to go along with its proposal for extension of TV licenses from three to five years.

The extension would be accompanied with various requirements aimed at insuring public input into TV programming and a minimal amount of local issue programming. Technicalaties aside, the FCC wants to make local TV stations responsive to local opinion on programming

That is a most worthwhile objective in theory but it may leave a lot to be desired in practice If a local TV station becomes too tied to local opinion, whose opinion will it be?

Will it be that of the crackpots who are all to willing to express themselves on everything from soup to nuts? Will it be the opinion of a few activists who, while well meant, may be highly vocal but quite unrepresentative of the average person?

And will the voice of the average person be heard at all? Maybe, but not necessarily What the FCC requirement for viewer input may boil down to is the squeaking wheel getting the grease and that is not an inherently good situation.

Sometimes the squeaky wheel may need the grease but at other times it is simply making more noise than any other wheel. A lot of people can make a lot of noise but are not necessarily constructive or enlightened in what they say.

Maybe the FCC idea would pan out for the good but it contains the threat of a constant popularity contest over local programming that could leave stations in a perpetual quandary. Any communications medium that lacks the insight and integrity to give careful consideration to its customers is in plenty of trouble even without a host of regulations from the FCC

What the FCC would do is further establish itself as the judge, jury and executioner over local TV stations and it is far enough down this road already

Primary Election Tomorrow

"We'll see how we do in the primary. If we're nominated, then we'll really hit the trail."

That's the type of cautious comment that typifies the pre-primary attitudes of many of the candidates in a city election where the stakes, while important in a local sense, are not especially high.

Many of the candidates, of course, can afford to budget only so much money or so many volunteered man hours throughout the entire campaign and thus are wary of a primary splurge

Unfortunately and unnecessarily, that kind of attitude also affects many voters who can be indifferent to a primary election and its ballots comprised of umpteen candidates for city council, school board and the like.

What they know but don't bother to think seriously about is that their candidate — if they have one — stands a much better chance of making it to the general election if they get out and vote in the first round

Tomorrow, Lincoln voters will nominate candidates for three City Council and three Board of Education seats and two seats on the Lincoln Airport Authority although the race for the latter is uncontested with only the two incumbents entered. Voters will also have a chance to vote on an important City Charter amendment which proposes a raise in pay for council members.

According to the Election Commissioner's office, an additional 12,313 Lincolnites are registered to vote in the primary over the number registered to vote in the last city election two years ago. Almost 80,000 are eligible to vote Tuesday, in fact.

Although the issues and personalities have not been elaborately defined during the primary campaign, the average voter should have enough knowledge of the candidates and the city and its problems to make a trip to the polls worthwhile.

By exercising his franchise in the primary the voter can participate in the elective process in the fullest sense. Hopefully, the marked increase in voter registration will be reflected in Tuesday's turnout

ON TARGET

Don Walton Hose It Down

So much water under the gate is beginning to seep out.

It's murky, polluted, dirty water. The White House needs a new waste treatment plant.

Every day in every way, it becomes clearer and clearer (yeah), I know, more clear) that the White House and the Committee to Re-Elect the President have soaked us in lies and deceit about Watergate and who knows what else.

The great lions of law and order like John Mitchell have, it now appears, lied to us about the special connections which IT&T enjoys with the Nixon administration

Meanwhile, that great symbol of the free enterprise system, IT&T, the corporate monster, has plotted foreign intervention with the CIA.

And White House aides have bullied a weak and subservient FBI director, lied to FBI agents and issued false denials to press and public apparently without any regard for either the truth or the citizenry.

White lies, they might protest. White House lies, more likely.

The Johnson White House purposely deceived us about Vietnam.

The Nixon White House seems to have turned deceit into a way of life.

All of the waste has conveniently floated to the surface after the election, saving the President and his massively-financed campaign organization any undue embarrassment.

But now he has to govern. And it may be difficult to govern if he doesn't make some effort to clean up the White House.

Washington reeks. The President owes us at least the favor of hosing the place down.

The 1973 Legislature may be remembered more for construction than anything else.

A body of contractors.

If the Appropriations Committee accepts recommendations of its fiscal staff, and that in turn is endorsed by the Legislature, nearly $30 million in construction projects will be approved in the capital improvements budget bill.

That is in addition to the $20 million state office building already approved by the Legislature.

And, in addition to that, the 1973 session will provide the continuing funds needed to construct the $12 million University of Nebraska fieldhouse.

Add all of that up and you get $62 million or so. Not bad.

Most of the construction goes to Lincoln, the site of state government.

It will join major federal and commercial projects already underway in the city—the federal office building, the new Hilton Hotel and a new National Bank of Commerce.

A new off-street parking complex, bus terminal and housing facility for the aged is also in the works.

And, with a little bit of luck, it will all be topped off by a downtown park, square or plaza where the old Post Office now stands.

Huh? How about it? Tear down the Post Office and fill in the square block from 8th to 10th and O and P with trees and fountains and grass and benches and all that good stuff.

The Hilton would face it; two major highway routes into Lincoln would pass it; the Clayton House would look out onto it; both commercial bus terminals would front on it. Lincoln would present a green face to its visitors, and a pleasant downtown park area for its own citizens.

With all that new construction either in progress or about to begin, a little greenery will be needed more than ever.

Goodbye, old Post Office. Hello, People's Park.

Over the past seven years I have had a chance to work very closely with Harry Allen on a number of projects. Since both he and I have strong opinions we have not always agreed, of course. But there are not many people who bring to a policy discussion the kind of preparation and independence of thinking that Harry Allen does. He is doing the same thing in his campaign for City Council. As far as I can determine, for example, he was the first candidate to speak out firmly against the zoning mess in Lincoln. A view which he has taken at some peril, I imagine.

Brando And Oscar: Tempest In Teepee

New York — Dear Marlon Brando

You're right about how badly the Indians have been treated in the movies and on the boob tube. Always the bad guys, right? But how about all those actors imitating Italian Mafia goons, decadent Irish police captains, and Las Vegas and Hollywood Jews you ordered knocked off in "The Godfather"? We won't even mention what happened in "Mutiny on the Bounty," and what you did to that poor young French broad in "Last Tango in Paris."

You would have made a much stronger case for your good cause if you had come to the stage and personally beaten that golden Oscar into a plough. Having dear little Sacheen Littlefeather substitute for you, and take some angry boos from Pale Face producers of Westerns, didn't make you eligible to man a barricade at Wounded Knee, where they don't shoot blanks.

The movie Indians, some of whom are actually Indians, will work out their grievances via the Actors Guild or through one of the more aggressive anti-defamation groups, just as did other ethnic groups whose people were stereotyped as ornery. For example, regard the change in the attitude toward the Black. He was the heavy from the time of "Birth of a Nation." Now the pendulum has swung the other way, and Jim Brown is a hero who shoots more whites than Geronimo ever did

There was a long period when all "Mexicans" were bad men on our flickering screens, followed by a period when cheers would ring out in darkened theaters if some stalwart hero shot a German, Japanese, Russian or Chinese.

We do business with the countries of those "villains" now and wouldn't think of calling Central Casting and ordering up a batch of them to act dirty and die of righteous cap-pistol wounds.

What you should have done, Marlon baby, was take the statuette, hock it, give the proceeds to the Indian commissary at Wounded Knee, and promise the real Indians to split some of the swag you're getting from all those mortal wounds suffered day and night by white goons in "The Godfather." And of course you should marry Sacheen Littlefeather, and have her father, the chief, spare the lives of trigger-happy John Wayne, Clint Eastwood, James Arness and others who have been striking it rich demeaning honest Equity Injuns.

Nixon And The Conservatives

WASHINGTON — President Nixon is in personal trouble over the Watergate case not because there is any evidence that he knew about the conspiracy, but because he has not handled it in accordance with the candor and fair moral principles he insists he represents

When he talks, Nixon is a moralizer, the faithful son of Quaker parents and Quaker ideals, whose duty it is to summon the people back to their ethical and religious ideals. But when he acts, he is a tough, cunning and even ruthless operator, and he is in trouble over the Watergate precisely because his actions do not correspond to his proclaimed ideals.

He says he is for an "open administration," open minds and open doors, but he will not allow his White House staff to be questioned by the Congress on their relations — not with the President, which is fair enough — but with the men convicted of bugging and burglarizing the Democrats at the Watergate

This is no longer an argument between the White House and the reporters who exposed the links between the Watergate and the President's re-election committee, or even between the Republicans and the Democrats Nixon is in trouble now with the conservative spies who were hired to break into the Watergate and are now talking about who hired them, and he is also in trouble with conservative Republican senators, like James Buckley of New York, and even the Republican leader in the Senate, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, who are insisting that all the facts in this conspiracy should finally be published

Accordingly, Nixon is in effect being asked by conservative members of his own party not to hide behind "executive privilege" or other legal arguments, but to get the facts out in the open and face the consequences, as he did in his last major political and moral crisis of the Checkers speech in the presidential campaign of 1952

At that time Nixon was charged with having a secret political campaign fund of $18,000, which seems almost innocent these days but Nixon felt obliged then to go on television and explain the facts, and the difference between things that are "illegal" and things that are "wrong."

"The usual thing to do when charges are made against you," he said then, "is to either ignore them or to deny them without giving details. I believe we've had enough of that in the United States . . .

"I feel that the people have got to have confidence in the integrity of the men who run for . . . office. It isn't a question of whether it (the $18,000 Nixon fund) was legal or illegal. That isn't enough. The question is, was it morally wrong?"

It may seem odd to look back on the Nixon Checkers speech as a symbol of political principle, but this question of what is legal and what is wrong is precisely the question before Nixon on the Watergate. Nixon the moralist is now acting as Nixon the lawyer.

He is now doing the "usual thing," which he condemned in 1952 He is either "ignoring" the charges in the Watergate or "denying them without giving details." He is not explaining anything personally, and also not allowing his staff to explain, and this raises another question.

For in the last four years, while Nixon has been arguing publicly for the decentralization of power, he has been centralizing power in a White House staff that has been loyal to the President but increasingly powerful and even arrogant toward the cabinet and the Congress.

The result of all this is that the Congress, even the Republican members of the Congress, are no longer willing to ignore the Watergate scandal but feel obliged to expose the facts, even if the facts hurt the President and expose the tricks of his political associates.

Every once in a while, the dirty business of party politics goes against the national interest, and even party members revolt. And this is what is happening now. During the last presidential election campaign, Republicans running for office didn't want to hear about the Watergate, and denounced the press for writing about it, but now that the campaign is over and the facts are coming out in court, even the politicans are insisting on getting at the facts.

But not yet the President. He is still trying to "ignore" the facts or "deny them without giving details" — the technique he denounced more than 20 years ago — but the technique is not working.

The courts and the Congress are now talking to the burglars, who are spilling the beans. And at some point the President is going to have to speak out on the facts or be unfaithful to the principles of what he calls "the open Nixon administration."

Will Activists Rule?

Efforts by the Federal Communications Commission in the area of television broadcasting continue to be made. In testimony recently before a congressional subcommittee the FCC discussed changes to go along with its proposal for extension of TV licenses from three to five years.

The extension would be accompanied with various requirements aimed at insuring public input into TV programming and a minimal amount of local issue programming. Technicalaties aside, the FCC wants to make local TV stations responsive to local opinion on programming.

That is a most worthwhile objective in theory but it may leave a lot to be desired in practice. If a local TV station becomes too tied to local opinion, whose opinion will it be?

Will it be that of the crackpots who are all to willing to express themselves on everything from soup to nuts? Will it be the opinion of a few activists who, while well meant, may be highly vocal but quite unrepresentative of the average person?

And will the voice of the average person be heard at all? Maybe, but not necessarily. What the FCC requirement for viewer input may boil down to is the squeaking wheel getting the grease and that is not an inherently good situation.

Sometimes the squeaky wheel may need the grease but at other times it is simply making more noise than any other wheel. A lot of people can make a lot of noise but are not necessarily constructive or enlightened in what they say.

Maybe the FCC idea would pan out for the good but it contains the threat of a constant popularity contest over local programming that could leave stations in a perpetual quandary. Any communications medium that lacks the insight and integrity to give careful consideration to its customers is in plenty of trouble even without a host of regulations from the FCC.

What the FCC would do is further establish itself as the judge, jury and executioner over local TV stations and it is far enough down this road already.

Primary Election Tomorrow

"We'll see how we do in the primary. If we're nominated, then we'll really hit the trail."

That's the type of cautious comment that typifies the pre-primary attitudes of many of the candidates in a city election where the stakes, while important in a local sense, are not especially high.

Many of the candidates, of course, can afford to budget only so much money or so many volunteered man hours throughout the entire campaign and thus are wary of a primary splurge.

Unfortunately and unnecessarily, that kind of attitude also affects many voters who can be indifferent to a primary election and its ballots comprised of umpteen candidates for city council, school board and the like.

What they know but don't bother to think serously about is that their candidate — if they have one — stands a much better chance of making it to the general election if they get out and vote in the first round.

Tomorrow, Lincoln voters will nominate candidates for three City Council and three Board of Education seats and two seats on the Lincoln Airport Authority, although the race for the latter is uncontested with only the two incumbents entered. Voters will also have a chance to vote on an important City Charter amendment which proposes a raise in pay for council members.

According to the Election Commissioner's office, an additional 12,313 Lincolnites are registered to vote in the primary over the number registered to vote in the last city election two years ago. Almost 80,000 are eligible to vote Tuesday, in fact.

Although the issues and personalities have not been elaborately defined during the primary campaign, the average voter should have enough knowledge of the candidates and the city and its problems to make a trip to the polls worthwhile.

By exercising his franchise in the primary the voter can participate in the elective process in the fullest sense. Hopefully, the marked increase in voter registration will be reflected in Tuesday's turnout.

EVENTS

IN PERSPECTIVE

(Mr. Dobler is out of the city on business. His column will be resumed Tuesday, April 3).

By C. L. SULZBERGER

TOKYO — It would appear from a lengthy conversation with Premier Kakuei Tanaka that Japan's current foreign policy is founded on American security guarantees, Chinese friendship and a relationship with Russia where economic potential is mitigated by political coolness. When assessing the views expressed by the present chief of government it is notable that Western Europe doesn't figure large on his horizon.

Tanaka acknowledges there is a national debate on neutralism versus the United States treaty tie but dismisses advocates of the former theory as relatively unimportant. Were their ideas ever to prevail, he says, communism would be developed as an alternative to the present system and "the only logical result would be to divide Japan like Vietnam."

While conceding that this country relies for protection on the U.S. Seventh Fleet plus ultimate nuclear deterrents, he argues it is unreasonable to expect Japan to pay for this in the way West Germany does by offset contributions for American military support in Europe. "That would merely strengthen the argument of those who wish to abrogate the bilateral security treaty," he contends. "We are not Germany. We have no Berlin Wall staring us in the face."

Moreover, he continues, Japan has no desire to become a military power once again. World War II was the first conflict the Japanese ever lost and they are unuse to the "European game" of "sometimes winning, sometimes losing."

Therefore great resentment exists against the mere thought of recreating serious armed strength, apart from modest self-defense forces. "Nobody," he says, "could win an election on the issue of constiutional revision to permit greater military power."

With this in mind, he insists, there is no fundamental difference between Tokyo and Washington and no contradiction in their views on China and Russia. He adds: "not a single Japanese diplomatic action is taken on these matters without prior consultation and agreement with the United States." (This apparent lack of resentment at the so-called "Nixon shocks" is not shared by all Tanaka's cabinet, notably Foreign Trade Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone).

With respect to China, a country toward which Japan feels a guilt complex and whose culture is viewed as Rome once viewed that of Athens, the premier is convinced Peking has no aspiration for super power status. He says: "that is what they told President Nixon and what they subsequently told me.

"Moreover, one-third of China's long frontier with Russia and Inida is restless and undefined. The Chinese population is rising at perhaps 2 per cent annually. Yet the gross national product is only half of Japan's. Therefore they must concentrate on internal development. If China had truly wanted to be a global super power it would not have encouraged the North Vietnamese to end their war."

Tokyo welcomes China's support in the Japanese dispute with Russia over territory seized by Moscow in 1945. Four small islands in the Kuriles are claimed by Japan. Tanaka says not only that Peking endorses this claim but that its press has written the entire Kuriles group should be handed back, something not even Tokyo has asked for.

The premier contends the Soviet government has not changed its attitude on this matter since 1957 when it offered to return two of the islands if Japan would agree to negotiate the status of the other two. He could not possibly "go back 15 years" on the issue he insists. Therefore it would be difficult for him to visit Moscow at this time as suggested by the Kremlin.

To summarize, Tanaka seems to place great reliance on continued U.S. understanding and support and also to hope for developing Chinese sympathy and diplomatic backing. Toward the U.S.S.R. his attitude seems to be dichotomic.

On the one hand he obviously desires an arrangement that would open to booming Japan new and relatively contiguous energy sources. On the other hand, he prefers political coolness until the territorial question is resolved.

ON TARGET

Don Walton Hose It Down

So much water under the gate is beginning to seep out.

It's murky, polluted, dirty water. The White House needs a new waste treatment plant.

Every day in every way, it becomes clearer and clearer (yeah), I know, more clear) that the White House and the Committee to Re-Elect the President have soaked us in lies and deceit about Watergate and who knows what else.

The great lions of law and order like John Mitchell have, it now appears, lied to us about the special connections which IT&T enjoys with the Nixon administration

Meanwhile, that great symbol of the free enterprise system, IT&T, the corporate monster, has plotted foreign intervention with the CIA.

And White House aides have bullied a weak and subservient FBI director, lied to FBI agents and issued false denials to press and public apparently without any regard for either the truth or the citizenry.

White lies, they might protest. White House lies, more likely.

The Johnson White House purposely deceived us about Vietnam.

The Nixon White House seems to have turned deceit into a way of life.

All of the waste has conveniently floated to the surface after the election, saving the President and his massively-financed campaign organization any undue embarrassment.

But now he has to govern. And it may be difficult to govern if he doesn't make some effort to clean up the White House.

Washington reeks. The President owes us at least the favor of hosing the place down.

The 1973 Legislature may be remembered more for construction than anything else.

A body of contractors.

If the Appropriations Committee accepts recommendations of its fiscal staff, and that in turn is endorsed by the Legislature, nearly $30 million in construction projects will be approved in the capital improvements budget bill.

That is in addition to the $20 million state office building already approved by the Legislature.

And, in addition to that, the 1973 session will provide the continuing funds needed to construct the $12 million University of Nebraska fieldhouse.

Add all of that up and you get $62 million or so. Not bad.

Most of the construction goes to Lincoln, the site of state government.

It will join major federal and commercial projects already underway in the city—the federal office building, the new Hilton Hotel and a new National Bank of Commerce.

A new off-street parking complex, bus terminal and housing facility for the aged is also in the works.

And, with a little bit of luck, it will all be topped off by a downtown park, square or plaza where the old Post Office now stands.

Huh? How about it? Tear down the Post Office and fill in the square block from 8th to 10th and O and P with trees and fountains and grass and benches and all that good stuff.

The Hilton would face it; two major highway routes into Lincoln would pass it; the Clayton House would look out onto it; both commercial bus terminals would front on it. Lincoln would present a green face to its visitors, and a pleasant downtown park area for its own citizens.

With all that new construction either in progress or about to begin, a little greenery will be needed more than ever.

Goodbye, old Post Office. Hello, People's Park.

Over the past seven years I have had a chance to work very closely with Harry Allen on a number of projects. Since both he and I have strong opinions we have not always agreed, of course. But there are not many people who bring to a policy discussion the kind of preparation and independence of thinking that Harry Allen does. He is doing the same thing in his campaign for City Council. As far as I can determine, for example, he was the first candidate to speak out firmly against the zoning mess in Lincoln. A view which he has taken at some peril, I imagine.

From my own experiences, from my reading of his positions, and from my own extensive knowledge of Harry Allen as a person, Lincoln will get a councilman of extraordinary ability and independence when he is elected. I strongly urge support for him.

Didn't Hedge

Lincoln, Neb.

I watched the candidates forum on TV. There was really only one candidate who knew what he was talking about — that was Harry Allen. He didn't hedge on the questions, he didn't duck and his answers made sense.

I'm going to give him my vote.

Harry Allen

Lincoln, Neb.

Every once in a while we get a chance to vote for an outstanding person for public office. Harry Allen is that kind of person. He is intelligent, independent and very competent. I am delighted to recommend him, and am equally pleased that The Star listed him as one of the top candidates.

An Asset

Lincoln, Neb.

I would like to recommend that the voters of Lincoln elect Sue Bailey to the City Council. In the time that I have known her I have been impressed with her keen civic awareness.

I sincerely believe that Sue Bailey would be an asset to the Council and would do her best to fairly represent all of the people of Lincoln.

Understanding

Lincoln, Neb.

Harry S. Allen is a candidate for City Council and we appreciated very much the fact that he took the time to come to northeast Lincoln to visit with me and other people in our area.

I found he had a good appreciation of the problems of northeast Lincoln as well as the rest of the city. I hope he is elected to the City Council.

Poll: Majority Favors Indians

By LOUIS HARRIS

A majority of the American people sympathize more with the militant American Indians than with the federal government in the Indian take-over at Wounded Knee, South Dakota — by 51% to 21%.

Ninety-three percent of the public has followed the episode.

Back of this public reaction to revents at Wounded Knee is the 75-15% lopsided conviction that American Indians have not been treated well in this country A substantial 60% rate the way Indians have been dealt with by the United States as no better than "poor"

Considerable Sympathy

Five of the major claims of the militant Indians meet with considerable sympathy among a majority of the American people

—The statement that "American Indians have been mistreated by the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs" is agreed with by 62-13%

—That "the U.S. government has not lived up to the treaties signed with the Indians" is supported by 59-10%.

—The Indians' claim that they 'have not been given a chance to determine their own future through self-government' is upheld by 59-17%

—The statement that 'unemployment among American Indians is the worst in the country" is accepted by 53-12%

—That "American Indians have not had a chance to make complaints about their treatment to the government" is believed by a plurality of 45-30%

Arts Council Brings Five Major Events

Ballet, orchestra, painting and mime included in new $750,000 program for midwest area

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The germ of an idea planted nearly two years ago by University of Nebraska President D B Varner has blossomed into a $750 000 program which will bring both performing and visual arts within reach of 11 million midwesterners during the coming year

The most ambitious of the five major projects now finalized by the new Mid-America Arts Alliance will be separate four-week tours early next year by both Joffrey Ballet Companies from New York

Joffrey I with 50 dancers will tour seven larger cities in Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas for one-half-week residencies

Joffrey II with 16 dancers will tour smaller towns and rural areas, and it too will give performances and hold master classes and demonstrations for college and public school students and community groups

Two Years Ago

The idea for a Midwest arts coalition was advanced in April 1971 by Varner who said such an effort could bring major league performing arts to the four state area

Eventually a steering committee was formed to launch the project and last fall it hired Peter Milstein to act as director of what is now called the Mid America Arts Alliance

This week from his office in the University of Nebraska System Building in Lincoln Milstein described what he called a pretty fair program for an organization just getting off the ground

The program, in the fiscal year beginning July 1, will operate with a budget totaling about $750,000, more than half of which is to come from various programs of the National Endowment for the Arts The remainder will come from private donations and ticket sales

The first regional project actually will start before the fiscal year begins when the new arts alliance board meets for the first time in Lincoln

That meeting is set for April 26 when the NU Weekend with Music will feature the St Louis Symphony and when the alliance will sponsor a conference to give state arts council members the chance to discuss philosophies and ideas

Mimes Slated

The first arts program will be a 10-week four state tour, beginning in October, of the Baltimore Center Stage Mime Company a duo which Milstein called probably the most exciting mime group in the country

The duo Bert Houle and Sophie Wibaux will spend about 2½ weeks in each state, performing half time and teaching the other half

Almost simultaneously, the alliance will begin an eight-month tour of a display of American landscape paintings already planned as a joint venture by the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery of Lincoln and the Joslyn Art Museum of Omaha.

The display of 200 paintings is based on the book, 'A Sense of Place' by artist Alan Gussow, who is helping to design the exhibition as a visual evidence of the connection between landscaping painting and the environment

Divided into four shows of 50 paintings each the exhibition will be on display for a month in five communities in each state and the alliance will sponsor residencies by some of the artists whose work is shown

JOFFREY BALLET . . . to visit 7 cities.

The alliance has hired David Smith of Kansas City to coordinate the show, working from Sheldon in Lincoln which is also to be the site of a media workshop to help gallery directors learn how to promote such projects

Ballet In 7 Cities

The City Center Joffrey Ballet Company I which insists on full orchestra accompaniment, will play in the seven cities with the communities own symphonies

The cities are Lincoln, St Louis, Kansas City, Wichita Manhattan Iowa City and Ames

Although the actual cost of a half week in each city will run nearly $45,000, alliance-coordinated subsidies will drop to about $17,000 the amount each community will have to raise from ticket sales

A community which invites the smaller company will raise about $2 000 as its share of the half-week cost of $8 250

The other major alliance project will be tours throughout the year by the St Louis Symphony and the Kansas City Philharmonic, the two major orchestras in the four-state area

Local Jitters Gone

The director of the Mid-America Arts Alliance says he believes early jitters about the impact of the alliance on existing arts programs have been transformed into "an atmosphere of real excitement about the possibilities for the future development" of arts programs

"I had to make clear that programming to be done would be done only if it benefited existing arts organizations in Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas said Peter Milstein

That's one of the reasons, Milstein said in an interview, that virtually all the programs the alliance has mounted for the coming year will depend on local sponsorship from community-based organizations.

At the same time, all alliance projects will be based on the dual concept of performances and residencies, the latter to give students and others a chance to work and learn under professionals in the performing and visual arts

Finally the alliance has assumed the role of helping local arts organizations build their strength by promoting them in other communities

The arts alliance which grew from an idea conceived by University of Nebraska President D B Varner will begin its first year with a $750 000 program bringing performing and visual arts shows to the four state area

"The ideas for the programming came not from me or from President Varner," said Milstein, "but from the communities, the arts councils and the public" in the towns he visited during several weeks of travel

The policy decision-making power of the alliance has been lodged in a 24-member board of directors which will meet for the first time in April in Lincoln

The board was recently formed from a steering committee which had been in existence for several months

The board was established first giving each state three members and then dividing the other 12 seats along population lines

One of the major projects of the alliance will tour the two major orchestras in the area throughout the rest of the region

The tours—of orchestra based in St Louis and Kansas City—hopefully will provide an example of the kind of joint effort that can make such programs successful said Milstein

MIME DUO . . . to teach, perform.

The funding will come from grants supplied by the National Endowment of the Arts and matched with alliance help by the communities hosting the symphonies he said

In Missouri where the state has taken a big role in funding arts projects state appropriations will also be part of the funding sources he said

The other three states are not as fortunate yet in having appropriations from the state legislatures to help with this kind of funding said Milstein

Thus he said the alliance is trying to fill that gap in Nebraska Iowa and Kansas

Milstein said he hopes the alliance can in that way prove to the legislatures and the governors that this kind of programming will work as well in their states as it does in Missouri

Senators Pessimistic About State Aid Bills

By ODELL HANSON
The Associated Press

If roadsigns in the Legislature can be believed Nebraskans can forget about any major breakthrouh in state aid to education or school property tax relief during the current session

Fading fast are prospects for any notable increase in state funding of local school district operations or the accompanying reduction in the property tax burden for school purposes

The state senators who have introduced state aid bills are almost unanimously pessimistic their comments indicate

Constitutional Trouble

And there's growing speculation that the school aid-property tax relief package recently proposed by Gov J James Exon will run into constitutional trouble apart from any trouble it might have getting through the Legislature

About all that remains is some prospect that lawmakers may vote a token increase in the level of state aid now at $35 million a year

Also possible is a constitutional amendment submission to voters next year, having the effect of shelving the issue until the 1975 Unicameral session

Gov Exon has said that if a constitutional objection blocks his tax relief plan he will ask a $20 million increase in state aid for fiscal 1974 using federal revenue sharing funds

A pending bill sponsored by Sen Frank Lewis of Bellevue also increases the aid level to $55 million

Heat Off Districts

The $20 million increase coupled with his proposed revision in the distribution formula would take the immediate heat off the districts with serious problems Lewis says

But Sen John De Camp of Neligh who has sponsored one of the major aid increase-tax relief bills says a token increase would be a super copout It recognizes the problem without offering a solution

De Camp describes himself as "totally pessimistic" that any major state aid bill will be enacted

I don't think the Legislature under any circumstances is going to buy the governor's plan said De Camp 'And I think if the Legislature is going to ultimately pass a really significant plan to reduce property taxes it will make sure the bill passes so the Legislature and not the governor receives the public credit

The politics of the situation also leads Sen Ramey Whitney of Chappell another state aid bill sponsor to suggest there will be no substantial aid increase

We might add $15 or $20 million but I doubt if it would be any greater

Election Year

Any increase in sales tax rates to accommodate increased state aid would be felt next year — an election year — while the property tax relief would not be noticeable until after the elections Senators facing re-election campaigns would be reluctant to arouse citizen ire it's reasoned

Gov Exon has told the Associated Press that his package of school aid property tax relief bills will be delivered to the Legislature in the coming week

Exon's package costing between $90 million and $110 million places limitations on school expenditures and provides state-financed rebates to certain home owners and farmers of some of the school taxes they pay There are provisions also for renters to share in the relief afforded

The governor said the plan was recommended by his Blue Ribbon Advisory Committee without regard to constitutionality questions Exon has asked the attorney general for an opinion on constitutionality particularly the classification of property owners eligible for rebates

Won't Revamp Plan

If the attorney general finds the classificatins unconstitutional Exon has said he will not revamp his plan but instead will suggest a constitutional amendment to make the plan legal

There is widespread speculation that the plan will be ruled unconstitutional and the Exon rebate proposal will be converted into a constitutional amendment proposal which could not be put to a public vote until next year

Sen Jerome Warner of Waverly, a chief architect of state school aid whose interim study committee has sponsored major pending bills on the subject, says he feels the school aid problem can and should be met without a constitutional amendment

The Legislature and governor already have the authority needed and 'the proper way would be to handle it through normal legislative processes, he said

Bills Repose

Warner heads the Legislature's Education Committee in which school aid bills currently repose Action has been held up awaiting the governor's bills

Admittedly not optimistic' that a major aid bill will emerge from this year's session Warner acknowledges that the cause was not aided by the recent 5-4 U S Supreme Court decision in a Texas case upholding the concept of using property taxes for the support of schools

He says the decision does not diminish the need to alleviate taxing inequities in Nebraska

But had the decision been the other way lawmakers could have rationalized that while a school aid bill may not be perfect we have to do something That would have expedited a political decision' he said

No Incentive, Excuse

Similarly Sen Whitney says the court decision provides no incentive or excuse to push through a major school aid bill

Sen Lewis says my optimism dropped when the court decision was revealed but subsequent discussions with legislative colleagues have indicated to him that there are enough votes for a good plan if one can evolve The trouble is we hardly have time to address ourselves to it

The fact the 90-day session now is nearly two thirds completed also contributes to Sen Warner's pessimism

We are rapidly approaching the stage when there will not be sufficient time for a bill to be understood by the public and receive the attention the issue merits

Arts Council Brings Five Major Events

Ballet, orchestra, painting and mime included in new $750,000 program for midwest area

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

The germ of an idea planted nearly two years ago by University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner has blossomed into a $750,000 program which will bring both performing and visual arts within reach of 11 million midwesterners diring the coming year.

The most ambitious of the five major projects now finalized by the new Mid-America Arts Alliance will be separate four-week tours early next year by both Joffrey Ballet Companies from New York.

Joffrey I, with 50 dancers, will tour seven larger cities in Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas for one-half-week residencies.

Joffrey II, with 16 dancers, will tour smaller towns and rural areas, and it too will give performances and hold master classes and demonstrations for college and public school students and community groups.

Two Years Ago

The idea for a Midwest arts coalition was advanced in April 1971 by Varner, who said such an effort could bring "major league" performing arts to the four-state area.

Eventually, a steering committee was formed to launch the project and last fall it hired Peter Milstein to act as director of what is now called the Mid-America Arts Alliance.

This week, from his office in the University of Nebraska System Building in Lincoln, Milstein described what he called "a pretty fair program for an organization just getting off the ground."

The program, in the fiscal year beginning July 1, will operate with a budget totaling about $750,000, more than half of which is to come from various programs of the National Endowment for the Arts. The remainder will come from private donations and ticket sales.

The first regional project actually will start before the fiscal year begins, when the new arts alliance board meets for the first time in Lincoln.

That meeting is set for April 26, when the NU "Weekend with Music" will feature the St. Louis Symphony and when the alliance will sponsor a conference to give state arts council members the chance to discuss philosophies and ideas.

Mimes Slated

The first arts program will be a 10-week four-state tour, beginning in October, of the Baltimore Center Stage Mime Company, a duo which Milstein called "probably the most exciting mime group in the country."

The duo, Bert Houle and Sophie Wibaux, will spend about 2½ weeks in each state, performing half-time and teaching the other half.

Almost simultaneously, the alliance will begin an eight-month tour of a display of American landscape paintings already planned as a joint venture by the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery of Lincoln and the Joslyn Art Museum of Omaha.

The display of 200 paintings is based on the book, "A Sense of Place," by artist Alan Gussow, who is helping to design the exhibition as a visual evidence of the connection between landscaping painting and the environment.

Divided into four shows of 50 paintings each, the exhibition will be on display for a month in five communities in each state and the alliance will sponsor residencies by some of the artists whose work is shown.

Starting Farming In Japan Costly

. . . Farmers Study In U.S.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Getting started farming in Japan is more expensive than it is in the United States and land is nearly impossible to obtain at any price, according to two young Japanese farmers attending the University of Nebraska.

Kazuhiro Yayakawa of Okayama, Japan, and Etsumi Fujita of Kagoshima are taking an intensified series of courses on animal husbandry under a special Japanese farmer training program at the University.

Japan has four beef breeds that are fairly popular. Red Angus, a black breed with short horns called Tankakushu, a horned version of Angus and a polled hornless Angus breed. Exotic types becomming popular in the U.S. are not well liked in Japan because feed is scarce and the larger animals require more feed than the smaller breeds.

Calf Area

The area Fujita comes from is considered a cow calf area. A typical faem has 20 cows on 40 acres of land with grass being brought to the cows. Green chopped grass, hay and silage are the primary cattle feed.

Fujita also produces seed potatoes, rice, alfalfa hay, and some wheat is grown in the area. Cattle are sold one head at a time at auctions held about every three months. Feeders buy them and fatten them for slaughter.

Fujita, who asks Americans to call him Eddie (it is easier to pronounce), thinks going back to his 40 horsepower Satoh tractor will be "a disappointment" after driving large American tractors.

Kazuhiro Yayakawa, who uses Kenny as an American name, grew up on a rice and tobacco farm but hopes to become a Japanese cattleman.

The government does not have low interest loans to help young men start farming. A major problem is getting some land. Land is simply not for sale at any price as the farmers hope to pass the land on to their children.

Much Hand Work

Hand labor is very important on Japanese farms. The tobacco and rice are started from seed and then the plants are set in rows in the fields with a macnine. Rice is cut with a binder and the bundles are dried on racks made of poles hung on posts. Rice that is combined must be dried to 16% moisture or it won't keep.

Yayakawa worked for a Colorado sheep rancher and for Jim Volk of Butte Creeke, who raises Hampshire hogs.

Being alone with sheep was not a bad experience. However he doesn't care much for sheep. "We have a crowded country so being alone was a new and nice experience, but I like cattle much better. There are no sheep in our area of Japan. However, our cooks have some famous dishes prepared from mutton," he said.

Under the training program the Japanese farm students spend a part of their time in school taking intensive courses in livestock husbandry and several months on farms in the United States getting practical experience.

Both young men plan to return to Japan this spring when school ends after a tour of the United States.

Saga Of Timothy Benson Is Ended After 6 Years

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

The saga of Timothy Benson, which has been nearly six years in the making, has finally reached a conclusion, according to the State Motor Vehicles Department.

Two months ago, the department found who it thought was a Benson that the states of Nebraska and California have been trying to locate in connection with an Oct. 9, 1967 car accident.

But as it turned out, they found the wrong one

The department, after it determined that Timothy O'Neill Benson, 22, of Columbus, wasn't the person who should have his license suspended for the $1,307 unpaid judgment outstanding against him because of the accident, purged his record of the bad mark.

Wasn't Dropped

The search, however, wasn't dropped.

William Peterson, head of the Records Division of the department, said with the aid of an anonymous phone call, the work of department field representatives and finally a quirk of fate, the right Timothy Benson has been located.

This time, Peterson added, everything checks out right down to the family members.

He said the department was moving in on the man but hadn't actually traced its way through a series of defunct addresses to put a hand on him when, lo and behold, the answer appeared right before his own eyes.

"I was just going though some accident records when all of a sudden a name clicked," Peterson said.

Living In Iowa

It turned out the subject of the search was living in Iowa but was involved in a car accident in Nebraska in which there was no proof of auto insurance shown to enforcement officers.

Peterson, however, declined to identify the man further, saying it would be best in view of the potential multiplicity of administrative and legal actions involved.

"We're here primarily to help people," he said. "We don't want to harass people."

The problem of the wrong Benson surfaced when the one living in Columbus tried to get insurance on his mobile home. In hopes of also selling him auto insurance, the agency ran a check through the Motor Vehicles Department.

Couldn't Write Policy

The result was that Benson was told even if he wanted auto insurance from them, they couldn't write a policy because his license was under suspension due to the unsatisfied judgment.

As it turned out, the San Diego, Calif., courts had only one piece of evidence — a drivers license number — which seemed to make the Columbus Benson their man.

The young man, however, had never been in Calfiornia and could prove by school records that he wasn't anywhere near the scene of the accident.

To this day, Peterson said, he has no idea how the court managed to get the wrong license number.

Also in the court records, which Peterson put to use in nailing down the case, were the names of the other members of the right Benson family.

Uniform Traffic Ticket Goal Of Statewide Plan

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

Sometime within the next few months, a motorist who receives a ticket in Nebraska will be handed the same ticket whether he or she is stopped in Alliance or Falls City.

That's the goal of a plan now being developed by James Dunlevey, the state court administrator appointed to oversee court reforms ordered by the 1972 Legislature.

Currently, there are few restrictions on motor vehicle citations used by law enforcement agencies and the result has been different tickets for different towns.

Such a system has resulted in problems as the state has moved toward uniformity in its court system at the county level where most of the tickets will not be handled.

Another problem has probably been a belief among the public that in some instances, they were the victim of "ticket traps," Dunlevey said.

Uniform Ticket

Dunlevey and his assistant, Alan Woods, are drafting and redrafting a uniform ticket which, if approved by the state Supreme Court, will be phased into use by all law enforcement agencies in the state.

The need for change became apparent because in many courts, prior to the 1972 Legislature's ordering a uniform system of district county courts, the citation was also used as a complaint in court.

Dunlevey said the uniform citation could also be used as a court complaint in the new courts.

"Our biggest problem right now is getting a form that everyone agrees on," he said, explaining that among things which have to be taken into account are the size of the filing drawers for the tickets, which differ around the state

"But I think we've got something now which everybody pretty much agrees on, and all we got to do now is refine it," he said.

Phased Into Use

The new ticket will be phased into use gradually, but Dunlevey said he hopes to have it in use across the state within the next eight months

The new form will be submitted to the State Supreme Court, which has constitutional authority to order "Uniform rules of procedure" for the state's courts.

Under that provision, there's no question that the high court has jurisdiction if the tickets will double as court complaints, according to Dunlevey

The chief benefit to the public will be "a letter understanding," he said

Dunlevey explained that "people are likely to feel more confidence in the system if it's the same whether they're stopped in Scottsbluff or South Sioux City."

Separate Accidents Fatal To 3

From Press Reports

Traffic accidents killed three persons in Nebraska during the weekend, raising the state's toll for 1973 to 84 — two more than had been recorded at this time last year.

The State Patrol said 21-year-old Gregory J. Power of Grand Island was killed Sunday afternoon in the headon collision of a car and a truck six-tenths of a mile east of Shelton on U.S. 30.

State Patrol trooper J. E. Rogers said the victim was the lone occupant of the westbound car.

The patrol said the driver of the cattle truck, Harold Bartels, 44, of Hastings, escaped injury.

Rogers said the auto apparently crossed the center line into the path of the eastbound truck.

Power and Bartels both were alone.

Saunders County Attorney Bob Sullivan said Sunday night investigation was continuing into the death of a Mead man.

Sullivan said Lyman Jones, 32, Mead, was struck and killed early Sunday by a car driven by David Konecky, about 23, of Omaha.

The incident occurred on a street near Jones' home in the eastern portion of Mead. Sullivan said it was believed Jones was returning from a party when struck by the car.

The county attorney said witnesses "gave the impression" that Jones was not in an "upright position" when the incident occurred.

He said a decision on whether to file charges against Jones, whose parents live in Mead, would be made following the completion of investigation.

Twenty-three-year-old Charles Puls Jr. of Pender was killed Saturday night in a one-car accident about 2.5 miles north of Pender on Highway 9.

The State Patrol said Puls' car crossed the center line of the road and crashed into a bridge railing.

Livestock feeders are saying that if the President is going to remove the import tax on imported meat he ought to remove the tax on steel and farm equipment, much of which is imported.

If Mr. Nixon thinks meat is high he ought to try to buy a new combine or even a part for one.

☆ ☆ ☆

The directors of the Lower Platte South Natural Rescources District (NRD) did a dumb thing when they leased their tree planter to a private tree service and then notified the people who bought trees that they could hire the tree planter for $50. You do get a crew with it, but when you formerly got the machine for a small rental fee you get the feeling you have been robbed, no matter how much you rationalize the thing.

The old machine is not in the best shape and needs to be replaced with 3 or 4 new ones for use in the large district.

The argument that you must not compete with the tree service doesn't hold water. All the old district ever did was rent the machine, and there is no place you can rent a tree planter in this area

☆ ☆ ☆

Have you noticed, we suddenly seem to be short of everything, food, meat, feed, lumber, transportation, parts and machinery just to name a few.

Some folks are wondering if there is some kind of a plot to jack up prices but there are valid reasons for some of the shortages . . . many reasons are related to income.

Farmers had inadequate income from pork so they got out of the business. The same thing happened to egg producers.

Efforts at cutting costs resulted in an inventory reduction program by farm equipment dealers which just got to working well when the food shortages caused a sharp increase in demand for equipment and parts.

Soybean meal supplies got tight due to bad weather throughout the world, new countries entering the livestock feed market for the first time, lack of fishmeal from Peru, bad harvesting conditions in much of the soybean growing area, and a tremendous increase in demand for expanded livestock production. It is impossible to believe that this combination of things will happen at the same time again.

Bad weather in the eastern states destroyed much of that area's hay crop, which cut down on feed supplies. So cows made less milk which raised your milk and cheese prices.

Transportation problems, due in part to trying to move several years' crop in one year, added to the food supply snarl, which is still far from solved.

The corn blight increased costs for raising hogs while prices were quite low. This is still a factor in meat prices.

Ecology lovers, protests against refineries, oil drilling and giant tankers came along at the same time the cars started using more gas due to emission suppression devices that ecologists demanded.

Gas powered lawn mowers, tillers, snowmobiles, minibikes, electric air conditioners, toothbrushes and can openers, gas-burning yard lights, grills and clothes dryers are all part of the problem.

In many cases man has created the shortages because he is becoming increasingly materialistic and uses more energy.

☆ ☆ ☆

All right, we got an energy crisis. What can we do to ease the problem . . . something that will bring the need home to everyone and be effective in distributing fuel and energy to vital areas of our economy?

Here are a few suggestions you might try on your congressman or the governor.

1. Ban all gas and electric yard lights.
2. Ban all gas powered lawn mowers, garden tillers, edgers, lawn sweepers, compost grinders, golf carts, campers, pleasure boats, minibikes, snowmibiles, and gas-operated recreation vehicles.
3. Put a 50 mile-an-hour speed limit on all state, federal and even county roads to conserve fuel.
4. Eliminate corn dryers, forcing farmers to dry corn on the ear in cribs like we used to do.
5. Force railroads to use some coal-burning engines to conserve oil imports.
6. Cut firewood by hand instead of with chain saws.
7. Outlaw electric toothbrushes, can openers, hair dryers, shavers and other nonessential energy users.
8. Teach the kids to turn off the closet light and conserve electricity whenever possible.

Finally the supreme sacrifice. Eliminate air conditioning for one year.

The idea is to save fuels that produce energy. But it seems to me equally important to make sure that every American from the richest to the poorest be made painfully aware that we do have a national fuel shortage.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The only thing on the horizon for grain and soybean prices is more continued uncertainty with a lower trend in prospect, particularly for soybeans

The fishmeal plants in Peru are back in production but are not expected to enter the world market with a protein product for at least three months due to unfilled orders.

Oil markets are not too promising plus there is concern that expanded production will fill many needs. Buyers who can hold off until new crop beams become available are trying to do so, hoping prices will be down.

On the positive side, wheat movement to ships is picking up a little, but there is little doubt that the May 31 deadline for Russian shipments will be impossible to meet

The availability of rail cars is improving very slowly with wide swings in local elevator prices to farmers based on whether or not a car is available on the day the price is quoted

Most of the milo and corn still in the field is of very poor quality with damage running all the way from 6% to more than 80%. If a farmer can feed it himself it is still worth harvesting, but some people are concerned about feeding damaged grain to breeding stock Some toxins are known to exist, particularly in corn, that can cause reproductive problems in hogs and cattle

Wet weather is delaying planting in southern states This is already causing concern over whether expanded acres can be seeded

Chicanos Are 'Minority No One Knows'

By BOB RUMMEL

Omaha (AP) — They have been described as "the minority no one knows," or perhaps more accurately, "strangers in their own land." Many have quietly resisted enculturation because they did not want to sacrifice their heritage and traditions.

Can these people, Nebraska's approximately 38,000 Mexican Americans, retain their past and still claim a share of the future?

Stan Porras, director of the State Mexican American Commission, believes they can and for the past year he has been spearheading a statewide effort to awaken Mexican Americans from a social and educational siesta over which they have had little control.

Porras, 34, says the year-old 10-member commission is striving to create an awareness among the state's Mexican Americans of available opportunities and how they can take advantage of them to gain a better place in today's society.

Awareness

Another objective of the commission, he says, is to foster an equal sense of awareness among the white, or Anglo, society of problems confronting Mexican Americans.

The commission also is seeking to unlock some doors which have been closed to Mexican Americans. "There is discrimination against Mexican Americans in Nebraska," he says. It exists in many ways, but especially in housing, employment and education, he explains.

The Scottsbluff native says the commission is concentrating on five key areas where Mexican Americans are experiencing difficulties — education, welfare, housing, employment and recreation.

The commission members — all Mexican Americans except for a representative of the governor — currently meet four times a year in cities which have a high concentration of Mexican Americans. Porras says he would like to hold monthly meetings and this is part of the reason why he is seeking a $48,910 budget for the commission's second year, up from a first-year appropriation of $29,682. Gov. J. James Exon trimmed his request by $18,540, but it was restored bh the Legislature's Budget Committee.

Porras says the commission has made noticeable headway in its initial year of operation. "It has made state and local agencies aware of the fact that we — Mexican Americans — are here," he says.

Height Rule Lowered

One recent success for the commission involved the lowering of the Nebraska State Patrol's height regulation. Gov. Exon last week directed the patrol to reduce its standards for the next group of recruits from 5 feet, 10 inches to 5 feet, 8 inches. Porras says the average Mexican American is two inches shorter than his Anglo counterpart and the height restriction prevented some qualified Mexican Americans from serving in the patrol.

Citing a 60% drop-out rate for Mexican American students, Porras says the commission has assigned top priority to the field of education.

The commission will attempt to map a comprehensive educational program at a meeting in Lincoln this spring which will bring together school administrators and Spanish-speaking teachers from across the state.

One of the problems in the field of education, he says, is that "the educational system knows nothing about the Mexican American — his culture, his behavior or his traditions."

He notes, too, that the bilingual ability of many Mexican American children actually can become a detriment in school

He suggests that teachers, instead of making a Mexican American child feel inferior because he may have difficulty grapsing the basics of English, should give the child encouragement and make him feel proud because he can speak two languages.

"Teachers could point to the little Mexican boy," he says, "and ask Anglo students, 'Why don't you learn another language, too?'"

Although he did not name the town, Porras says "serious problems" in the educational system of one town in western Nebraska have been brought to the commission's attention and a "thorough investigation" is being planned.

While he favors the commission's approach to problems — meetings, discussions, studies and responsible action — he says, "If things don't change, then we'll have to change our tactics."

Agrees With Methods

He points out, however, that he does agree with the methods used by some militant Chicano groups Although these groups do serve to focus attention on problems and inequities, he says, "their actions can leave a sour taste."

"The militants" he says, "are seeking changes overnight and it won't happen. Attitudes have to be changed and this takes time."

Meanwhile, Porras is attempting to make the commission a more viable force in the lives of Nebraska's Mexican American citizens. One of his immediate goals is to produce a monthly newsletter for distribution to all Mexican American families in the state.

This, he hopes, will not only keep them informed of the commission's progress, but will lead them to look to the commission for help and guidance.

"This is their commission," he says, "It is the first time that Mexican-Americans of Nebraska ever had an organization such as we do now. The commission can be used by them to get into areas which in the past they have not been able to enter "

People Selecting Trees Becoming 'Discriminating'

Lexington (AP) — Dawson County Extension Agent Harold Stevens says people are becoming more discriminating in selecting ornamental trees for shade, street planting and beauty.

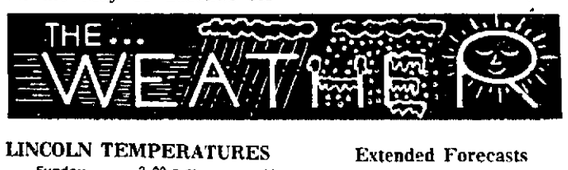

He said he believes the loss of a lot of elms has brought people to demand variety as insurance against total loss. But, he said the public looks for other things, too.

He said the people don't look for trees that drop messy flowers or fruits, trees that drop a shower of twigs regularly — or even trees that don't break down under loads of ice or snow in wind storms.

He said people ask for dual purpose trees — those that have flowers or fruit combined with interesting texture or bark, foilage or twigs.

Perhaps most of all, he said, persons want trees free of insect and disease problems.

Some of the best choices subject to personal preference are green ash, hackberry, linden, thornless honeylocust and Scott maple, he said

Starting Farming In Japan Costly

. . . Farmers Study In U.S.

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Getting started farming in Japan is more expensive than it is in the United States and land is nearly impossible to obtain at any price, according to two young Japanese farmers attending the University of Nebraska.

Kazuhiro Yayakawa of Okayama, Japan, and Etsumi Fujita of Kagoshima are taking an intensified series of courses on animal husbandry under a special Japanese farmer training program at the University.

Japan has four beef breeds that are fairly popular. Red Angus, a black breed with short horns called Tankakushu, a horned version of Angus and a polled hornless Angus breed. Exotic types becomming popular in the U.S. are not well liked in Japan because feed is scarce and the larger animals require more feed than the smaller breeds.

Calf Area

The area Fujita comes from is considered a cow calf area. A typical faem has 20 cows on 40 acres of land with grass being brought to the cows. Green chopped grass, hay and silage are the primary cattle feed.

Fujita also produces seed potatoes, rice, alfalfa hay, and some wheat is grown in the area. Cattle are sold one head at a time at auctions held about every three months. Feeders buy them and fatten them for slaughter.

Fujita, who asks Americans to call him Eddie (it is easier to pronounce), thinks going back to his 40 horsepower Satoh tractor will be "a disappointment" after driving large American tractors.

Kazuhiro Yayakawa, who uses Kenny as an American name, grew up on a rice and tobacco farm but hopes to become a Japanese cattleman.

The government does not have low interest loans to help young men start farming. A major problem is getting some land. Land is simply not for sale at any price as the farmers hope to pass the land on to their children.

Much Hand Work

Hand labor is very important on Japanese farms. The tobacco and rice are started from seed and then the plants are set in rows in the fields with a macnine. Rice is cut with a binder and the bundles are dried on racks made of poles hung on posts. Rice that is combined must be dried to 16% moisture or it won't keep.

Yayakawa worked for a Colorado sheep rancher and for Jim Volk of Butte Creeke, who raises Hampshire hogs.

Being alone with sheep was not a bad experience. However he doesn't care much for sheep. "We have a crowded country so being alone was a new and nice experience, but I like cattle much better. There are no sheep in our area of Japan. However, our cooks have some famous dishes prepared from mutton," he said.

Under the training program the Japanese farm students spend a part of their time in school taking intensive courses in livestock husbandry and several months on farms in the United States getting practical experience.

Both young men plan to return to Japan this spring when school ends after a tour of the United States.

Saga Of Timothy Benson Is Ended After 6 Years

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

The saga of Timothy Benson, which has been nearly six years in the making, has finally reached a conclusion, according to the State Motor Vehicles Department.

Two months ago, the department found who it thought was a Benson that the states of Nebraska and California have been trying to locate in connection with an Oct. 9, 1967 car accident.

But as it turned out, they found the wrong one.

The department, after it determined that Timothy O'Neill Benson, 22, of Columbus, wasn't the person who should have his license suspended for the $1,307 unpaid judgment outstanding against him because of the accident, purged his record of the bad mark.

Wasn't Dropped

The search, however, wasn't dropped.

William Peterson, head of the Records Division of the department, said with the aid of an anonymous phone call, the work of department field representatives and finally a quirk of fate, the right Timothy Benson has been located.

This time, Peterson added, everything checks out right down to the family members.

He said the department was moving in on the man but hadn't actually traced its way through a series of defunct addresses to put a hand on him when, lo and behold, the answer appeared right before his own eyes.

"I was just going though some accident records when all of a sudden a name clicked," Peterson said.

Living In Iowa

It turned out the subject of the search was living in Iowa but was involved in a car accident in Nebraska in which there was no proof of auto insurance shown to enforcement officers.

Peterson, however, declined to identify the man further, saying it would be best in view of the potential multiplicity of administrative and legal actions involved.

"We're here primarily to help people," he said. "We don't want to harass people."

The problem of the wrong Benson surfaced when the one living in Columbus tried to get insurance on his mobile home. In hopes of also selling him auto insurance, the agency ran a check through the Motor Vehicles Department.

Couldn't Write Policy

The result was that Benson was told even if he wanted auto insurance from them, they couldn't write a policy because his license was under suspension due to the unsatisfied judgment.

As it turned out, the San Diego, Calif., courts had only one piece of evidence — a drivers license number — which seemed to make the Columbus Benson their man.

The young man, however, had never been in Calfiornia and could prove by school records that he wasn't anywhere near the scene of the accident.

To this day, Peterson said, he has no idea how the court managed to get the wrong license number.

Also in the court records, which Peterson put to use in nailing down the case, were the names of the other members of the right Benson family.

Uniform Traffic Ticket Goal Of Statewide Plan

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

Sometime within the next few months, a motorist who receives a ticket in Nebraska will be handed the same ticket whether he or she is stopped in Alliance or Falls City.

That's the goal of a plan now being developed by James Dunlevey, the state court administrator appointed to oversee court reforms ordered by the 1972 Legislature.

Currently, there are few restrictions on motor vehicle citations used by law enforcement agencies and the result has been different tickets for different towns.

Such a system has resulted in problems as the state has moved toward uniformity in its court system at the county level where most of the tickets will not be handled.

Another problem has probably been a belief among the public that in some instances, they were the victim of "ticket traps," Dunlevey said.

Dunlevey and his assistant, Alan Woods, are drafting and redrafting a uniform ticket which, if approved by the state Supreme Court, will be phased into use by all law enforcement agencies in the state.

The need for change became apparent because in many courts, prior to the 1972 Legislature's ordering a uniform system of district county courts, the citation was also used as a complaint in court.

Dunlevey said the uniform citation could also be used as a court complaint in the new courts.

Under that provision, there's no question that the high court has jurisdiction if the tickets will double as court complaints, according to Dunlevey.

The chief benefit to the public will be "a letter understanding," he said.

Dunlevey explained that "people are likely to feel more confidence in the system if it's the same whether they're stopped in Scottsbluff or South Sioux City."

Livestock feeders are saying that if the President is going to remove the import tax on imported meat he ought to remove the tax on steel and farm equipment, much of which is imported.

If Mr. Nixon thinks meat is high he ought to try to buy a new combine or even a part for one.

☆ ☆ ☆

The directors of the Lower Platte South Natural Rescources District (NRD) did a dumb thing when they leased their tree planter to a private tree service and then notified the people who bought trees that they could hire the tree planter for $50. You do get a crew with it, but when you formerly got the machine for a small rental fee you get the feeling you have been robbed, no matter how much you rationalize the thing.

The old machine is not in the best shape and needs to be replaced with 3 or 4 new ones for use in the large district.

The argument that you must not compete with the tree service doesn't hold water. All the old district ever did was rent the machine, and there is no place you can rent a tree planter in this area.

☆ ☆ ☆

Have you noticed, we suddenly seem to be short of everything, food, meat, feed, lumber, transportation, parts and machinery just to name a few.

Some folks are wondering if there is some kind of a plot to jack up prices but there are valid reasons for some of the shortages . . . many reasons are related to income.

Farmers had inadequate income from pork so they got out of the business. The same thing happened to egg producers.

Efforts at cutting costs resulted in an inventory reduction program by farm equipment dealers which just got to working well when the food shortages caused a sharp increase in demand for equipment and parts.

Soybean meal supplies got tight due to bad weather throughout the world, new countries entering the livestock feed market for the first time, lack of fishmeal from Peru, bad harvesting conditions in much of the soybean growing area, and a tremendous increase in demand for expanded livestock production. It is impossible to believe that this combination of things will happen at the same time again.

Bad weather in the eastern states destroyed much of that area's hay crop, which cut down on feed supplies. So cows made less milk which raised your milk and cheese prices.

Transportation problems, due in part to trying to move several years' crop in one year, added to the food supply snarl, which is still far from solved.

The corn blight increased costs for raising hogs while prices were quite low. This is still a factor in meat prices.

Ecology lovers, protests against refineries, oil drilling and giant tankers came along at the same time the cars started using more gas due to emission suppression devices that ecologists demanded.

Gas powered lawn mowers, tillers, snowmobiles, minibikes, electric air conditioners, toothbrushes and can openers, gas-burning yard lights, grills and clothes dryers are all part of the problem.

In many cases man has created the shortages because he is becoming increasingly materialistic and uses more energy.

☆ ☆ ☆

All right, we got an energy crisis. What can we do to ease the problem . . . something that will bring the need home to everyone and be effective in distributing fuel and energy to vital areas of our economy?

Here are a few suggestions you might try on your congressman or the governor.

1. Ban all gas and electric yard lights.
2. Ban all gas powered lawn mowers, garden tillers, edgers, lawn sweepers, compost grinders, golf carts, campers, pleasure boats, minibikes, snowmibiles, and gas-operated recreation vehicles.
3. Put a 50 mile-an-hour speed limit on all state, federal and even county roads to conserve fuel.
4. Eliminate corn dryers, forcing farmers to dry corn on the ear in cribs like we used to do.
5. Force railroads to use some coal-burning engines to conserve oil imports.
6. Cut firewood by hand instead of with chain saws.
7. Outlaw electric toothbrushes, can openers, hair dryers, shavers and other non-essential energy users.
8. Teach the kids to turn off the closet light and conserve electricity whenever possible.

Finally the supreme sacrifice. Eliminate air conditioning for one year.

The idea is to save fuels that produce energy. But it seems to me equally important to make sure that every American from the richest to the poorest be made painfully aware that we do have a national fuel shortage.

Weekly Grain Report

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

The only thing on the horizon for grain and soybean prices is more continued uncertainty with a lower trend in prospect, particularly for soybeans.

The fishmeal plants in Peru are back in production but are not expected to enter the world market with a protein product for at least three months due to unfilled orders.

Oil markets are not too promising plus there is concern that expanded production will fill many needs. Buyers who can hold off until new crop beams become available are trying to do so, hoping prices will be down.

On the positive side, wheat movement to ships is picking up a little, but there is little doubt that the May 31 deadline for Russian shipments will be impossible to meet.

The availability of rail cars is improving very slowly with wide swings in local elevator prices to farmers based on whether or not a car is available on the day the price is quoted.

Most of the milo and corn still in the field is of very poor quality with damage running all the way from 6% to more than 80%. If a farmer can feed it himself it is still worth harvesting, but some people are concerned about feeding damaged grain to breeding stock. Some toxins are known to exist, particularly in corn, that can cause reproductive problems in hogs and cattle.

Wet weather is delaying planting in southern states. This is already causing concern over whether expanded acres can be seeded.

Chicanos Are 'Minority No One Knows'

By BOB RUMMEL

Omaha (AP) — They have been described as "the minority no one knows," or perhaps more accurately, "strangers in their own land." Many have quietly resisted enculturation because they did not want to sacrifice their heritage and traditions.

Can these people, Nebraska's approximately 38,000 Mexican Americans, retain their past and still claim a share of the future?

Stan Porras, director of the State Mexican American Commission, believes they can and for the past year he has been spearheading a statewide effort to awaken Mexican Americans from a social and educational siesta over which they have had little control.

Porras, 34, says the year-old 10-member commission is striving to create an awareness among the state's Mexican Americans of available opportunities and how they can take advantage of them to gain a better place in today's society.

Awareness

Another objective of the commission, he says, is to foster an equal sense of awareness among the white, or Anglo, society of problems confronting Mexican Americans.

The commission also is seeking to unlock some doors which have been closed to Mexican Americans. "There is discrimination against Mexican Americans in Nebraska," he says. It exists in many ways, but especially in housing, employment and education, he explains.

The Scottsbluff native says the commission is concentrating on five key areas where Mexican Americans are experiencing difficulties — education, welfare, housing, employment and recreation.

The commission members — all Mexican Americans except for a representative of the governor — currently meet four times a year in cities which have a high concentration of Mexican Americans. Porras says he would like to hold monthly meetings and this is part of the reason why he is seeking a $48,910 budget for the commission's second year, up from a first-year appropriation of $29,682. Gov. J. James Exon trimmed his request by $18,540, but it was restored bh the Legislature's Budget Committee.

Porras says the commission has made noticeable headway in its initial year of operation. "It has made state and local agencies aware of the fact that we — Mexican Americans — are here," he says.

Height Rule Lowered

One recent success for the commission involved the lowering of the Nebraska State Patrol's height regulation. Gov. Exon last week directed the patrol to reduce its standards for the next group of recruits from 5 feet, 10 inches to 6 feet, 8 inches. Porras says the average Mexican American is two inches shorter than his Anglo counterpart and the height restriction prevented some qualified Mexican Americans from serving in the patrol.

Citing a 60% drop-out rate for Mexican American students, Porras says the commission has assigned top priority to the field of education.

The commission will attempt to map a comprehensive educational program at a meeting in Lincoln this spring which will bring together school administrators and Spanish-speaking teachers from across the state.

One of the problems in the field of education, he says, is that "the educational system knows nothing about the Mexican American — his culture, his behavior or his traditions."

He notes, too, that the bilingual ability of many Mexican American children actually can become a detriment in school.

He suggests that teachers, instead of making a Mexican American child feel inferior because he may have difficulty grapsing the basics of English, should give the child encouragement and make him feel proud because he can speak two languages.

"Teachers could point to the little Mexican boy," he says, "and ask Anglo students, 'Why don't you learn another language, too?' "

Although he did not name the town, Porras says "serious problems" in the educational system of one town in western Nebraska have been brought to the commission's attention and a "thorough investigation" is being planned.

While he favors the commission's approach to problems — meetings, discussions, studies and responsible action — he says, "If things don't change, then we'll have to change our tactics."

Agrees With Methods

He points out, however, that he does agree with the methods used by some militant Chicano groups. Although these groups do serve to focus attention on problems and inequities, he says, "their actions can leave a sour taste."

"The militants" he says, "are seeking changes overnight and it won't happen. Attitudes have to be changed and this takes time."

Meanwhile, Porras is attempting to make the commission a more viable force in the lives of Nebraska's Mexican American citizens. One of his immediate goals is to produce a monthly newsletter for distribution to all Mexican American families in the state.

This, he hopes, will not only keep them informed of the commission's progress, but will lead them to look to the commission for help and guidance.

"This is their commission," he says, "It is the first time that Mexican-Americans of Nebraska ever had an organization such as we do now. The commission can be used by them to get into areas which in the past they have not been able to enter."

People Selecting Trees Becoming 'Discriminating'

Lexington (AP) — Dawson County Extension Agent Harold Stevens says people are becoming more discriminating in selecting ornamental trees for shade, street planting and beauty.

He said he believes the loss of a lot of elms has brought people to demand variety as insurance against total loss. But, he said the public looks for other things, too.

He said the people don't look for trees that drop messy flowers or fruits, trees that drop a shower of twigs regularly — or even trees that don't break down under loads of ice or snow in wind storms.

He said people ask for dual purpose trees — those that have flowers or fruit combined with interesting texture or bark, foilage or twigs.

Perhaps most of all, he said, persons want trees free of insect and disease problems.

Some of the best choices subject to personal preference are green ash, hackberry, linden, thornless honeylocust and Scott maple, he said.

Torture Stories Stir Opposition

. . . Against Aid For N. Viets

Washington (AP) — Reports from returning prisoners of war of torture and mistreatment by Hanoi have stirred new attacks in Congress against U.S. aid for North Vietnam.

President Nixon has said he plans to ask Congress for such aid as "an investment in peace."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the torture stories have not changed his own position that aid to Hanoi would help ensure the peace But, he added, he does not know what effect the stories will have on getting aid through Congress.

"Even before this it looked difficult," Mansfield said.

Sen James L. Buckley, Con.-R-N.Y., called on Secretary of State William P. Rogers to issue the "strongest possible protest" to North Vietnam over treatment of U S prisoners of war

In a statement Sunday Buckley also urged President Nixon to "carefully reconsider any proposal for economic assistance to North Vietnam in light of the POW reports on treatment and prison conditions "

Rep Joel T Broyhill, R-Va., said the stories "convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages "

Nixon administration officials have urged congressmen not to commit themselves now against voting for Hanoi aid, clearly hoping to pick up more support when the proposal is made months after the end of the war and it hopefully will be evident Hanoi is keeping the peace.

Nixon's foreign affairs adviser, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, reportedly told congressmen Thursday there still have been no U.S.-Hanoi discussions on firm proposals for the aid.

One of the House Foreign Affairs Committee members that Kissinger briefed privately said he understood him to say the President will not ask Congress for Hanoi aid until the North Vietnamese are committed against renewing war operations now that U.S. forces have withdrawn.

Secretary of State William P Rogers has testified before Congress that although resistance after a war to aiding the former enemy is normal, he is confident Congress finally will agree with Nixon that Hanoi aid would help maintain the peace.

He and other officials denied congressmen's interpretations that the aim of the money is to pay Hanoi off to keep the peace Rogers said its aim would be to turn Hanoi's attention away from hostility and to cooperation and its own reconstruction

Informal polls shortly after the Jan 27 Vietnam peace agreement was announced indicated the Senate was more than two-third opposed to any aid for Hanoi

Sentiment in the 434-member House has not been measures, even informally

FIREMEN . . . sift through rubble of three small buildings.

7 Killed By Blast In Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — "One loud boom, a scream and the building fell to pieces "

That was the description by Edward Cornett, a witness to an explosion Saturday night that left at least six persons dead and destroyed three small buildings.

Firemen were still searching for possible victims on Sunday.

"We believe everyone is out," Fire Marshal Norman Wells said, "but we'll keep checking until we're sure."

The cause of the blast was not immediately determined, but Wells said it "probably was a natural gas explosion."

At least 15 persons were injured in the blast shortly before 9 p m in the low-income Over-the-Rhine section, about one mile north of downtown Cincinnati

Three persons were hospitalized at General Hospital. Their conditions were not given.

Another 13 persons were treated and released.

Shattered were Clara & Al's Cafe and bar and apartments above it, a small apartment building behind the cafe, and a storefront church beside it.

Wells said one body was found on the sidewalk in front of the cafe; one was found in the rear apartment building; two others in the basement under the cafe; one behind a cold drink cooler in the cafe's bar area; and another in an apartment above the cafe.

Listed among the dead were: John W. Johnson, 42, the bartender; William Pagano, 71, and Lawrence Stewart, 40, both listed as friends of Johnson who were visiting the cafe; and Pearl Martin, 72, and Jesse Goode, 50, both residents of one of the buildings.

Also dead was Francis G. Puckett, about 48 and believed to be a Cincinnati resident.

The seventh victim was not immediately identified.

The sixth victim was not immediately identified.

Wells said firemen had to use hand saws to reach injured persons because of a heavy presence of natural gas.

Three survivors were dug out of rubble on the cafe building's second floor, and another out of the rear apartment building.

Wells said there was no fire after the explosion, which shattered windows in a block-wide radius.

A crowd of more than 100 spectators watched as two cranes lifted rubble away from the explosion site and onto city dump trucks Sunday.

"We're watching closely," Wells said. "If we see a body or part of a body, we'll dig in there by hand and look around "

Two cars were destroyed by flying rubble from the brick and wood structures. Another dozen cars were damaged, fire officials said.

Italian-American Blasts Brando

New York (UPI) — An Italian-American leader said Sunday he will ask Marlon Brando to explain how the star of a film which "defamed the Italian-American community" can criticize Hollywood's depiction of Indians.

New York Secretary of State John P. Lomenzo, head of an Italian-American organization called the Columbian Coalition, said the question is asked in a letter he will send to the actor Monday.

Brando, in a statement read by an Indian woman, refused to accept this year's best-actor Oscar for his performance in "The Godfather" because of the movie industry's depiction of Indians over the years

"We feel there is a great need for clarification of the action you caused at this year's Academy Awards ceremony," Lomenzo told Brando in his letter

"Frankly, we see a blatant contradiction between your reasoning for refusing the award and your participation in a film that has defamed the Italian-American community.

"Do you really distinguish the movie industry's vilification of the American Indian from its treatment of Italian-Americans in 'The Godfather'?"

North Viets Claim POWs Well Treated

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam claimed Sunday it treated its American captives well and that returning prisoners' torture stories were drummed up to deflect attention from U S "crimes" in Vietnam

The official Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan quoted statements from U S officials at the time the first U S prisoners left North Vietnam that the men were in good mental and physical condition

No matter what the prisoners say now, the paper said, "the humanitarian policy" of North Vietnam's government "toward captured U S military personnel has been welcomed by the whole of progressive mankind "

The Nhan Dan commentary, broadcast by the official Vietnam News Agency, declared "The pilots of U S piratic planes who bombed during the last eight years were criminals However, in keeping with their humanitarian policy and for the sake of their friendship with the American people, the government and the Vietnamese people treated them well This truth no one could deny "

Nhan Dan said even the head of the U S delegation to the Joint Military Commission, calling at a North Vietnamese detention camp for U.S military personnel, said "he was completely satisfied with that concentration camp and that captured U.S. B52 crewmen were humanely and well treated "

Now, it said, U.S authorities "hope to fool the American and world public, which is protesting against the serious violations of the Paris agreement on Vietnam by the U S and the Saigon administration, and demanding that they strictly respect and scrupulously implement all the provisions of the agreement

"They also hope to whitewash the heinous crimes they and the Saigon administration have committed at the prisons in South Vietnam and to elude the return of civilian personnel under their illegal detention," Nhan Dan charged

It added "The U S authorities tried to rouse bigoted chauvinism among the American people in order to plead for their former mistakes and wreck the friendship between the Vietnamese and American peoples. However, they cannot easily deceive the people Their trick will bring them no good, and will not contribute to the building of normal relations between (North Vietnam) and the United States, as they often claimed "

Engineering Fair Ends As Awards Presented

Nebraska City (AP) — The Greater Nebraska Science and Engineering Fair ended in Nebraska City Sunday with award presentations

First place went to Todd Christell, a senior at Omaha Westside High School He received a $3,250 scholarship to the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska

Christell's exhibit concerned amplification aids for persons with impaired hearing. He also won a trip to San Diego, Calif., to attend the International Science Fair in May.

John McGuire, a junior at Mount Michael High School at Elkhorn, won second place and a trip to the San Diego event.

Scott James, Omaha Benson senior, won a $2,250 scholarship to the engineering and architecture college

Twelve $100 scholarships also were awarded

There were 161 projects entered, representing exhibits involving about 200 Nebraska junior and senior high school students

The state project is affiliated with the National Science Fair, Washington, D C.

Lakers Wins 'Eyes' Award

Hastings (AP) — A long-time Columbus business and civic leader, P W Lakers, has been named a recipient of the "Eyes on Nebraska Award "

Charles Gray of Columbus president of the Nebraska Optometric Association which sponsors the award, said Lakers "has given both to his community and state those qualities which go far beyond the call of duty to make our Midwest a better area in which to live "

The treasurer of the Nebraska Public Power District has among his contributions an effort as district governor of Nebraska Lions the establishment of an eye bank in the state. He also helped start a district leader dog project for the blind.

Growing Soybeans Has Its Advantages

Hershey (AP) — A Hershey-area farmer figures there are advantages to planting part of his cropland in soybeans rather than corn Carroll Carsten raises from 15 to 100 acres a year

He says planting costs are less for beans than for corn little fertilizer is needed and the extra crop provides a spread in the harvest time

He said the cost of certified seed has never been much higher than the market price of soybeans and much less than the cost of hybrid seed corn. Last year, he saved enough beans to plant the 65 acres he's planned for this year.

Unless the soil is very deficient in potash and phosphorous, he says, there is little need to fertilize beans, and the addition of nitrogen is a waste of money for beans, which are legumes

Soybean raisers need to be a jump ahead of the weeds and if the grower can keep them out when the plants are small, later developing weeds won't cut the yield

In a crop rotation plan he says beans help improve the ground by loosening it

His wife also is a bean advocate, having learned to cook green beans and "we think they are delicious "

The pods are cooked in salted water until they are tender, then as the pods are cooled a bit they are popped open with the fingers and the beans, usually three in a pod, are eaten

"We also like to chew on raw beans. They have a nutlike texture and flavor," she said.

Washington (AP) — Reports from returning prisoners of war of torture and mistreatment by Hanoi have stirred new attacks in Congress against U.S. aid for North Vietnam.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the torture stories have not changed his own position that aid to Hanoi would help ensure the peace. But, he added, he does not know what effect the stories will have on getting aid through Congress.

"Even before this it looked difficult," Mansfield said.

Sen. James L. Buckley, Con.-R-N.Y., called on Secretary of State William P. Rogers to issue the "strongest possible protest" to North Vietnam over treatment of U.S. prisoners of war.

In a statement Sunday Buckley also urged President Nixon to "carefully reconsider any proposal for economic assistance to North Vietnam in light of the POW reports on treatment and prison conditions."

Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va., said the stories "convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages."

Nixon administration officials have urged congressmen not to commit themselves now against voting for Hanoi aid, clearly hoping to pick up more support when the proposal is made months after the end of the war and it hopefully will be evident Hanoi is keeping the peace.

Nixon's foreign affairs adviser, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, reportedly told congressmen Thursday there still have been no U.S.-Hanoi discussions on firm proposals for the aid.

One of the House Foreign Affairs Committee members that Kissinger briefed privately said he understood him to say the President will not ask Congress for Hanoi aid until the North Vietnamese are committed against renewing war operations now that U.S. forces have withdrawn.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers has testified before Congress that although resistance after a war to aiding the former enemy is normal, he is confident Congress finally will agree with Nixon that Hanoi aid would help maintain the peace.

He and other officials denied congressmen's interpretations that the aim of the money is to pay Hanoi off to keep the peace. Rogers said its aim would be to turn Hanoi's attention away from hostility and to cooperation and its own reconstruction

Informal polls shortly after the Jan. 27 Vietnam peace agreement was announced indicated the Senate was more than two-third opposed to any aid for Hanoi.

Sentiment in the 434-member House has not been measures, even informally.

FIREMEN . . . sift through rubble of three small buildings.

7 Killed By Blast In Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — "One loud boom, a scream and the building fell to pieces."

That was the description by Edward Cornett, a witness to an explosion Saturday night that left at least six persons dead and destroyed three small buildings.

Firemen were still searching for possible victims on Sunday.

"We believe everyone is out," Fire Marshal Norman Wells said, "but we'll keep checking until we're sure."

The cause of the blast was not immediately determined, but Wells said it "probably was a natural gas explosion."

At least 15 persons were injured in the blast shortly before 9 p.m. in the low-income Over-the-Rhine section, about one mile north of downtown Cincinnati

Three persons were hospitalized at General Hospital. Their conditions were not given.

Another 13 persons were treated and released.

Shattered were Clara & Al's Cafe and bar and apartments above it, a small apartment building behind the cafe, and a storefront church beside it.

Wells said one body was found on the sidewalk in front of the cafe; one was found in the rear apartment building; two others in the basement under the cafe; one behind a cold drink cooler in the cafe's bar area; and another in an apartment above the cafe.

Listed among the dead were: John W. Johnson, 42, the bartender; William Pagano, 71, and Lawrence Stewart, 40, both listed as friends of Johnson who were visiting the cafe; and Pearl Martin, 72, and Jesse Goode, 50, both residents of one of the buildings.

Also dead was Francis G. Puckett, about 48 and believed to be a Cincinnati resident.

The seventh victim was not immediately identified.

The sixth victim was not immediately identified.

Wells said firemen had to use hand saws to reach injured persons because of a heavy presence of natural gas.

Three survivors were dug out of rubble on the cafe building's second floor, and another out of the rear apartment building.

Wells said there was no fire after the explosion, which shattered windows in a block-wide radius.

A crowd of more than 100 spectators watched as two cranes lifted rubble away from the explosion site and onto city dump trucks Sunday.

"We're watching closely," Wells said. "If we see a body or part of a body, we'll dig in there by hand and look around."

Two cars were destroyed by flying rubble from the brick and wood structures. Another dozen cars were damaged, fire officials said.

Italian-American Blasts Brando

New York (UPI) — An Italian-American leader said Sunday he will ask Marlon Brando to explain how the star of a film which "defamed the Italian-American community" can criticize Hollywood's depiction of Indians.

New York Secretary of State John P. Lomenzo, head of an Italian-American organization called the Columbian Coalition, said the question is asked in a letter he will send to the actor Monday.

Brando, in a statement read by an Indian woman, refused to accept this year's best-actor Oscar for his performance in "The Godfather" because of the movie industry's depiction of Indians over the years.

"We feel there is a great need for clarification of the action you caused at this year's Academy Awards ceremony," Lomenzo told Brando in his letter.

"Frankly, we see a blatant contradiction between your reasoning for refusing the award and your participation in a film that has defamed the Italian-American community.

"Do you really distinguish the movie industry's vilification of the American Indian from its treatment of Italian-Americans in 'The Godfather'?"

Kenya Official Will Visit U.S.

Nairobi, Kenya (AP) — Foreign Minister Njoroge Mungai left Sunday for a 10-day visit to the United States.

He will participate in an African-American Institute meeting in New York and hold discussions with government officials in Washington, informed sources said.

North Viets Claim POWs Well Treated

TOKYO (AP) — North Vietnam claimed Sunday it treated its American captives well and that returning prisoners' torture stories were drummed up to deflect attention from U.S. "crimes" in Vietnam.

The official Communist party newspaper Nhan Dan quoted statements from U.S. officials at the time the first U.S. prisoners left North Vietnam that the men were in good mental and physical condition.

No matter what the prisoners say now, the paper said, "the humanitarian policy" of North Vietnam's government "toward captured U.S. military personnel has been welcomed by the whole of progressive mankind."

The Nhan Dan commentary, broadcast by the official Vietnam News Agency, declared: "The pilots of U.S. piratic planes who bombed during the last eight years were criminals. However, in keeping with their humanitarian policy and for the sake of their friendship with the American people, the government and the Vietnamese people treated them well. This truth no one could deny."

Nhan Dan said even the head of the U.S. delegation to the Joint Military Commission, calling at a North Vietnamese detention camp for U.S. military personnel, said "he was completely satisfied with that concentration camp and that captured U.S. B52 crewmen were humanely and well treated."

Now, it said, U.S. authorities "hope to fool the American and world public, which is protesting against the serious violations of the Paris agreement on Vietnam by the U.S. and the Saigon administration, and demanding that they strictly respect and scrupulously implement all the provisions of the agreement.

"They also hope to whitewash the heinous crimes they and the Saigon administration have committed at the prisons in South Vietnam and to elude the return of civilian personnel under their illegal detention," Nhan Dan charged.

It added: "The U.S. authorities tried to rouse bigoted chauvinism among the American people in order to plead for their former mistakes and wreck the friendship between the Vietnamese and American peoples. However, they cannot easily deceive the people. Their trick will bring them no good, and will not contribute to the building of normal relations between (North Vietnam) and the United States, as they often claimed."

Engineering Fair Ends As Awards Presented

Nebraska City (AP) — The Greater Nebraska Science and Engineering Fair ended in Nebraska City Sunday with award presentations.

First place went to Todd Christell, a senior at Omaha Westside High School. He received a $3,250 scholarship to the College of Engineering and Architecture at the University of Nebraska.

Christell's exhibit concerned amplification aids for persons with impaired hearing. He also won a trip to San Diego, Calif., to attend the International Science Fair in May.

John McGuire, a junior at Mount Michael High School at Elkhorn, won second place and a trip to the San Diego event.

Scott James, Omaha Benson senior, won a $2,250 scholarship to the engineering and architecture college.

Twelve $100 scholarships also were awarded.

There were 161 projects entered, representing exhibits involving about 200 Nebraska junior and senior high school students.

The state project is affiliated with the National Science Fair, Washington, D.C.

Lakers Wins 'Eyes' Award

Hastings (AP) — A long-time Columbus business and civic leader, P. W. Lakers, has been named a recipient of the "Eyes on Nebraska Award."

Charles Gray of Columbus, president of the Nebraska Optometic Association which sponsors the award, said Lakers "has given both to his community and state those qualities which go far beyond the call of duty to make our Midwest a better area in which to live."

The treasurer of the Nebraska Public Power District has among his contributions an effort as district governor of Nebraska Lions the establishment of an eye bank in the state. He also helped start a district leader dog project for the blind.

Growing Soybeans Has Its Advantages

Hershey (AP) — A Hershey-area farmer figures there are advantages to planting part of his cropland in soybeans rather than corn. Carroll Carsten raises from 15 to 100 acres a year.

He says planting costs are less for beans than for corn. little fertilizer is needed and the extra crop provides a spread in the harvest time.

He said the cost of certified seed has never been much higher than the market price of soybeans and much less than the cost of hybrid seed corn. Last year, he saved enough beans to plant the 65 acres he's planned for this year.

Unless the soil is very deficient in potash and phosphorous, he says, there is little need to fertilize beans, and the addition of nitrogen is a waste of money for beans, which are legumes.

Soybean raisers need to be a jump ahead of the weeds and if the grower can keep them out when the plants are small, later developing weeds won't cut the yield.

In a crop rotation plan, he says beans help improve the ground by loosening it.

His wife also is a bean advocate, having learned to cook green beans and "we think they are delicious."

The pods are cooked in salted water until they are tender; then as the pods are cooled a bit they are popped open with the fingers and the beans, usually three in a pod, are eaten.

"We also like to chew on raw beans. They have a nutlike texture and flavor," she said.

Bull Testing Field Day Set

Ogallala (AP) — Plans have been announced for a performance testing field day April 19 at the Western Nebraska Bull Test Station at Mueller and Mueller Feedlots.

An open house starting at 11 a.m. will allow guests to view and inspect the 285 bulls on test. An afternoon program will include speakers on various areas of beef improvement and testing.

BY THE TIME YOU FINISH THIS NEWSPAPER, A DRUNK DRIVER WILL HAVE KILLED SOMEONE.

It happens every 20 minutes.

Every 20 minutes of an average day, there's a fatal car accident caused by a drunk driver.

Sometimes he kills a man. Sometimes a woman. Sometimes a child. And sometimes he kills himself.

He doesn't mean to. But he can't help it. And it keeps happening.

Every 20 minutes.

It's probably not the first time he was drunk and driving. And he's probably very drunk. Something like eight shots of bourbon in a couple of hours. In fact, the chances are two out of three that he's a heavy, serious problem drinker.

The problem drinker is the problem. And we have to get him off the road because he can't get himself off.

There are many things that can be done to help him and to help us. Stricter drunk driving laws, stricter law enforcement, scientific breath tests, and court supervised treatment among them. There's a huge national highway safety project just beginning that needs you to understand and to help.

Help.

The News Around Town

It was an interesting weekend, socially speaking, and it was due to out of town guests, beautiful music and, of course parties.

The guests, the beautiful music and the parties go hand-in-hand, of course.

☆ ☆ ☆

For instance — When Miss Laurie Faulkner entertained at an hor d'oeuvres party at her home on Saturday evening, the incentives were Mr. and Mrs. John McMillan, and Miss Alison Bartlett, all of Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs McMillan and Miss Barlett arrived on Friday and were the house guests of Mr. and Mrs Clark Faulkner and Miss Faulkner.

☆ ☆ ☆

The beautiful music was heard on Friday evening when University of Nebraska's president, Durward Varner, and Mrs. Varner were a dinner host and hostess at their home.

During the after dinner hours the guests were entertained by the University's artist in residence, Miss Zara Nelsova 'cellist, who presented a group of 'cello delights.

One nice thing about weekends — there always is another one. At the moment we have Saturday, April 7, in mind, and the reason for the interest in this particular date is to be found in Kearney.

It seems that the Nebraska Republicans Founders' Day dinner is to be held at the Holiday Inn in Kearney on Saturday, April 14.

But preceding the dinner, festivities have been planned for U.S. Senator and Mrs. Carl T. Curtis. As a matter of fact it really will be Mrs. Curtis who will be in the limelight since it will be almost her first introduction to her husband's constituents. The presentation to the Republicans in Nebraska will take place at a 4 o'clock tea for which the wives of other members of the Nebraska Congressional delegation, and of the Founders' Day committee, will be hostesses.

Afternoon Wedding

Miss Debbie Amen of Denver, Colo., attended the bride as the maid of honor, and the bridal entourage was completed by Mrs. Ron Dittmer of Crete, the bridesmatron; and bridesmaids Miss Janet Amen of Denver, Colo., and Miss Mary Sue Drudik and Miss Jan Busboom, both of Crete.

Clifford Young served as best man, and the corps of groomsmen and ushers included Wayne Summers, Jerry Colvert, Leonard Beranek of Friend, David Brewer of Aurora, Ill., Terry Egger of Hallam, and Thomas Riffner of Chicago, Ill.

The Empire gown chosen by the bride was fashioned of silk organza and Venetian lace. Appliques of the lace, which contoured the neckline and ornamented the sheer Bishop sleeves, patterned the sculptured bodice and were repeated on the softly gathered, A-line skirt. Her lace-bordered veil was cotillion length, and she carried a bouquet of yellow roses accented with greenery.

Mr. Beranek and his bride will reside at 5327 Walker St., in Lincoln.

Party Honors Guests From West Africa

Last week was a lonely one for the University of Nebraska Campus. It was spring vacation, and there was a general exodus to home towns.

But there was an instance where the home town was so far away that students from there couldn't make the trip. So, — the home town came to them

We have in mind Miss Alice Chu and her brother, David Chu who are students at the University of Nebraska, and whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wie-yung Chu of Tema, Ghana, West Africa, came to Lincoln to visit their son and daughter.

Mr and Mrs Chu are actually from Hong Kong, but Mr Chu, who is on vacation, works with textiles in West Africa, and so the family address is Tema, Ghana

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Vern Bohling paid courtesy to the visitors when they entertained them at their home.

In the picture, from the left, are Mr and Mrs. Bohling, Miss Nancy Wong, Mrs. Chu, Miss Chu, young Johnny Bohling, Mr. Chu and Mrs. George Peng.

Mr. and Mrs Chu left for Los Angeles on Sunday, and from there will go to Hong Kong for a three weeks stay — then to Tokyo — and on back to Tema.

ABBY: mercykilling

DEAR ABBY: I hear they are trying to pass a law making it legal to let people die just by discontinuing treatment. They say it will be used so old people who are incurably sick won't have to linger and suffer after all hope for recovery is gone.

The thought of this is frightening. WHO will decide who is old enough and sick enough?

If you know anything about "euthanasia" — which in plain English means "mercy killing," please state your views.

CONCERNED IN MIAMI

DEAR CONCERNED: "Euthanasia" literally means "the good death," and I am all for it. I believe it is cruel and senseless to prolong life by artificial means when there is no hope for recovery.

The right to die with dignity should be everybody's right. The Euthanasia Education Council (whose meetings I have personally attended) in New York, has made available "A Living Will." It reads as follows:

"To My Family, My Physician, My Clergyman, My Lawyer — If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stand as the testament of my wishes:

"If there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental or spiritual disability, I (name) request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures. Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity, and old age — it is the one certainty. I do not fear death as much as I fear the indignity of deterioration, dependence, and hopeless pain. I ask that drugs be mercifully administered to me for terminal suffering even if they hasten the moment of death.

"This request is made while I am in good health and spirits. Altho this document is not legally binding, you who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow its mandates. I recognize it places a heavy burden of responsibility upon you, and it is with the intention of sharing that responsibility and of mitigating any feelings of guilt that this statement is made."

Sign document in the presence of witnesses, and give it to your family physician, attorney, and/or a member of your family. (Better yet, obtain three copies, and give each one a copy. I did).

"A Living Will" document may be obtained by writing to: THE EUTHANASIA COUNCIL 250 W. 75th St. New York, N. Y. 10019

The document is free, but since this is a nonprofit organization, donations from $1 and up are gratefully accepted. One woman sent $500 saying: "This is the most marvelous thing I've ever heard of," I agree.

Convention Speaker

MISS CATHERINE SCOTT

The 37th annual Rho State convention of Delta Kappa Gamma (International) will take place at Hotel Radisson-Cornhusker on Friday and Saturday, April 6 and 7.

Miss Catherine Scott of Winnipeg, Mantoba, Canada, the organization's Northwest Regional Director, will be the honored guest and featured speaker at the President's Banquet which will be held on Saturday evening. "Why Doubts? Why Limits?" will be the topic of Miss Scott's address. The guest speaker, who was born and educated in Manitoba, is the past president of Epsilon Province of Delta Kappa Gamma, and formerly served on the constitutional and research committees of the international association.

"We Limit Tomorrow Only By Today's Doubts" will be the theme of the annual convention over which Mrs. Merle Duffy of Long Pine, state president, will preside, and for which the members of Lincoln's two chapters — Alpha Theta and Zeta — will serve as hostesses

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

Partnership misunderstandings are certainly not a rarity, even in the highest echelons of bridge Consider this deal from the 1969 Trials where George Rapee and Sidney Lazard settled in four hearts with a 4-1 trump fit, when all the time they could have made six clubs with perfectly normal play.

Rapee's diamond cuebid suggested that partner bid a new suit, but Lazard couldn't very well oblige. Instead he tried to show reasonably good spades and moderate high-card strength by jumping to three spades.

When Rapee bid four clubs, Lazard tried to indicate a heart feature in the form of a singleton by responding four hearts. Lazard thought his partner would not read this as a heart suit, since he had denied heart length earlier.

But Rapee thought otherwise — he assumed that South had three or four hearts — and passed.

Oddly enough, four hearts proved unbeatable! Lazard wound up losing a diamond and two trumps, and so made the contract.

Even if West had led a trump originally, declarer would still have succeeded. After cashing the A-K-Q of trumps and A-K of spades, felling the queen, South would play the jack of clubs.

Whether West covered or not, declarer would lead the jack of spades at the earliest opportunity and discard a diamond. Regardless of how the opponents elected to defend thereafter South would make ten tricks for sure, and if the defense slipped only slightly he would finish with eleven.

But despite the amazing outcome of the hand, we continue to recommend to our readers that they avoid 4-1 trump fits!

Rain—Only Handicap At Golf Luncheon

We suspect that the theme song at the Lincoln Women's Municipal Golf Association luncheon on Saturday was "rain, rain, go away — come back again another day" — and we're wagering that "but don't hurry" was added — just for good measure.

It was the Women's Municipal Golf Association spring luncheon — the one, so 'tis said, that inspires every golferette to dust off her clubs and be in readiness for the big day that opens the golf season for the LWMGA That big day is one week from tomorrow — April 10 — if it doesn't rain. The play will be on the Holmes course

Just in case someone may have forgotten — there is an evening group for the women who can't play during the day We hear that the evening players manage to do nine holes before dark

From the left they are Mrs Alex Allison, Mrs Tom Sall and Mrs Lyle Dorsey.

Life Members Are Honored

Four life memberships in the Nebraska PTA recently were presented at a meeting of the Merle Beattie PTA Honored as life members were Mrs Helen Suess, Mrs June Hudson, Mrs Sue Roberts, and Mrs Royce Holtgrewe

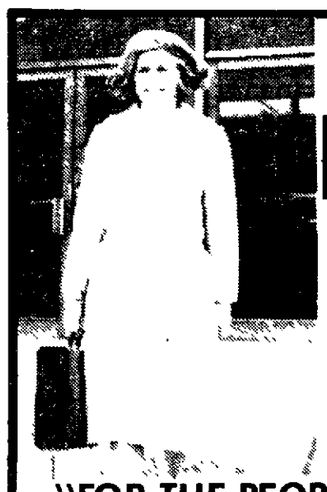

Mr and Mrs Holtgrewe also were named presidents of that association during the meeting. Other new officers who will be installed at the meeting scheduled to take place on Tuesday evening, April 10, include Mrs Larry Frazier, first vice president, Roger Massey, second vice president, Mrs Sherry Kaup, third vice president, Dr Ralph Thorpe, honorary president, Mrs James Lococo, secretary, and Mrs Gordon Kuhn, treasurer

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Morro Bay — "O, oysters come and walk with us.

"Along the briny beach."

We drove down to the great oyster festival at Morro Beach. I mean by car! I haven't driven Highway 101 in years. so much has the speedy jet airplane changed our way of life.

On this shellfish occasion, little Morro Bay serves 7,000 free bowls of oyster stew. The French wine people chimed in with a new wine — L'Huitriere, meaning "the oyster one."

It's the fragrant Muscadet. From the sunny Loire river valley, where red poppies grow and wicked French Kings hung their enemies in cages behind turreted chateau walls.

I popped the moppets in the back of the car. They immediately reached over and tuned the radio to their favorite station that sends out clangy country music.

"How come my dog don't bark when you come around nc more?"

The Salinas valley is lovely at this time of year. The fields are green. Great bunches of orange poppies stand at attention on the roadside. The hills are patched with smoke-blue lupine.

Golden mustard is all over the place. They say the Spaniard Dutra in early days planted mustard near Castroville to season his tough California beef. From there it spread all over the state.

The radio played on: "Who's been foolin' around with Mama Bear?"

The Oyster Festival opened with a press party aboard the sighseeing boat, Tiger's Folly.

L'Huitriere in every glass. Muscadet is a straw-gold color. Dry. At 10 a.m., it puts a tiger in your tank. (Was that the Tiger's Folly?)

We cruised up and down the bay. Past the enormous rock sighted by Portola's expedition.

Costanso, the keeper of the daily log, wrote: "At a short distance from the mouth of the estuary, and in front of our camp, there was a very large rock, shaped like a round head.

"At high tide it becomes an island, and is then separated — a little less than a gunshot — from the shore."

I said to the moppets: "This is a historic place. Listen." But they only said: "Is that cooking sherry you're drinking?"

While history rolled by, they discovered the juke box and began feeding it quarters for country music.

"Move out Little Dog 'cause Big Dog's movin' in!"

The French wine people came around and said, how did I like L'Huitriere? I am an old hand at the French wine game.

I said: "It has a good nose." (This shows you know the moves.)

The youngest child came over. He said: "Our father drinks cooking sherry."

I gave him a quarter bribe and shooed him off to the juke box. The box began to play: "Have you seen the birthmark on Sadie Thompson's thigh?"

Everybody moved in on the enormous buffet: Crab. Shrimp. Oysters nn the half shell.

Somebody said: "We flew the oysters in from the East. Morro Bay oysters are good for stews but not for half shell eating."

Everybody had a few more glasses of wine. It must have a lot of vitamins for talk grew louder. I met the mayor. "Welcome to Morro Bay."

The Tiger's Folly docked. We all went up to eat oyster stew. I pulled the children away from the juke box which was roaring: "You ain't woman enough to take my man!"

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

Morro Bay — "O, oysters come and walk with us,

"Along the briny beach."

We drove down to the great oyster festival at Morro Beach. I mean by car! I haven't driven Highway 101 in years, so much has the speedy jet airplane changed our way of life.

On this shellfish occasion, little Morro Bay serves 7,000 free bowls of oyster stew. The French wine people chimed in with a new wine — L'Huitriere, meaning "the oyster one."

It's the fragrant Muscadet. From the sunny Loire river valley, where red poppies grow and wicked French Kings hung their enemies in cages behind turreted chateau walls.

I popped the moppets in the back of the car. They immediately reached over and tuned the radio to their favorite station that sends out clangy country music.

"How come my dog don't bark when you come around no more?"

☆☆☆

The Salinas valley is lovely at this time of year. The fields are green. Great bunches of orange poppies stand at attention on the roadside. The hills are patched with smoke-blue lupine.

Golden mustard is all over the place. They say the Spaniard Dutra in early days planted mustard near Castroville to season his tough California beef. From there it spread all over the state.

☆☆☆

The Oyster Festival opened with a press party aboard the sighseeing boat, Tiger's Folly.

L'Huitriere in every glass. Muscadet is a straw-gold color. Dry. At 10 a.m., it puts a tiger in your tank. (Was that the Tiger's Folly?)

We cruised up and down the bay. Past the enormous rock sighted by Portola's expedition.

Costanso, the keeper of the daily log, wrote: "At a short distance from the mouth of the estuary, and in front of our camp, there was a very large rock, shaped like a round head.

"At high tide it becomes an island, and is then separated — a little less than a gunshot — from the shore."

I said to the moppets: "This is a historic place. Listen." But they only said: "Is that cooking sherry you're drinking?"

While history rolled by, they discovered the juke box and began feeding it quarters for country music.

"Move out Little Dog 'cause Big Dog's movin' in!"

☆☆☆

The French wine people came around and said, how did I like L'Huitriere? I am an old hand at the French wine game.

I said: "It has a good nose." (This shows you know the moves.)

The youngest child came over. He said: "Our father drinks cooking sherry."

I gave him a quarter bribe and shooed him off to the juke box. The box began to play: "Have you seen the birthmark on Sadie Thompson's thigh?"

☆☆☆

Everybody moved in on the enormous buffet: Crab. Shrimp. Oysters nn the half shell.

Somebody said: "We flew the oysters in from the East. Morro Bay oysters are good for stews but not for half shell eating."

Everybody had a few more glasses of wine. It must have a lot of vitamins for talk grew louder. I met the mayor. "Welcome to Morro Bay."

The Tiger's Folly docked. We all went up to eat oyster stew. I pulled the children away from the juke box which was roaring: "You ain't woman enough to take my man!"

Drug Arrests Up On Mexican Line

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seizures of marijuana and other illegal drugs have increased sharply along the U.S.-Mexico border, and American officials are crediting Mexican authorities for much of the success

Operation Cactus along the Arizona-Mexico border resulted in 125 arrests and the seizure of $20 million worth of marijuana, heroin and cocaine in a five-week period that ended in mid-March.

What was probably the biggest single haul so far this year came Feb. 14 when U.S. agents boarded a 160-ton ship in Los Angeles Harbor and confiscated 6 1 tons of marijuana with a street value they estimated at $4 1 million. Four men were arrested. The vessel — the Don Miguel, once used in filming the movie "Mr. Roberts," — had been towed by a tug from its home port of Mazatlan, Mexico.

The success of Operation Cactus has raised the possibility of similar large-scale attacks on smuggling elsewhere along the border

"The beautiful thing about this (Operation Cactus) was the cooperation among the law enforcement agencies," said Phillip Jordan, special agent in charge of Arizona for the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs "Without the cooperation of U.S., Mexican and local authorities, this wouldn't be possible."

In Washington, Henry Price, a spokesman for the bureau, said, "Mexican cooperation is one of the main things now. The president and attorney general of Mexico want drug traffic through Mexico knocked off. They're going at this thing with determination."

He said the United States has provided Mexico with radios and with two helicopters for spotting fields of marijuana.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Raul A. Gonzales of Brownsville, Tex., says there has been a substantial increase in drug seizures by the U.S. Customs Service, and that he spends 70 per cent of his time prosecuting marijuana and other drug cases.

"What is frightening about this is that they (U.S. Customs) say they are only apprehending 10 per cent of the offenders," he added. "You have 90 per cent coming through. It's so easy to bring drugs across from Mexico by air or boat.

"We're not catching the big boys. We're catching the 'mules' and the 'runners.'"

Gonzales said that over the past five years he has noted that a different type of person is being prosecuted for marijuana smuggling. "The people who are being caught are persons with advanced college degrees, sons and daughters of professional people, sons and daughters of the respected families of our communities," he said. MORE

Cleburne Maier, director of Houston Customs Region VI, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and parts of Louisiana, says there has been a 49 per cent increase in seizures of marijuana and all types of dangerous drugs since 1967, reflecting an intensive effort to check more people, aircraft and automobiles and inspect them more carefully.

The region's total of 10,411 seizures in 1972 and 10,521 in 1971 compared with 6,886 in 1968. Most of the seizures were along the Texas and New Mexico borders.

Herman Moore, chief patrol agent of the U.S. Border Patrol, which covers 350 miles of international boundary in New Mexico and West Texas, said his agency seized about 1,000 pounds of marijauana in the week ended March 15 alone.

Seizures along the Arizona-Mexico border included 48,000 pounds of marijuana so far this year, compared with 10,000 pounds in the first three months of 1972, and 12 pounds of heroin this year against four pounds a year ago.

As a result, the customs service said, the price of marijuana has gone from $100 per kilo (2.2 pounds) last year to $200, and the price of heroin has risen from $500-$600 an ounce to $1,000-$1,100.

Seizures of marijuana in the border area extending from San Diego, Calif., to Yuma, Ariz., rose sharply in the six months ended in January 1972 from the corresponding period a year earlier, the Customs Service reported. Confiscation in the latest period totaled 825,050 ounces against 625,086 ounces in the prior period. But confiscations of heroin, cocaine and hash dropped.

Comparative figures for the six-month period ended January 1973 and a year earlier were: heroin 85.7 ounces and 150.2 ounces, cocaine 106.7 ounces and 135 ounces, and hashish 1,038.1 ounces and 1,893.6 ounces.

There was no immediate explanation for the decrease.

PORT-A-JOHN . . . for $45 a month. AP

Portable John Solves Septic Tank Problem

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Margaret Bilby has a portable outhouse sitting in her front yard

Mrs. Bilby, 32, rented the privy Thursday because she said she was fed up with the high water level and failing septic tanks in her neighborhood — a subdivision of expensive, ranch-type homes with shaded streets and manicured lawns

"If I have to," she said, "I'm going to put a sign on it. 'Summit Township Sewer System'"

Jack Ellison, township zoning administrator, said he's told Mrs. Bilby he believes the structure is illegal. But he hasn't gotten a court order to make her move it.

She said other officials — most irate, indignant and embarassed and some sympathetic — have promised that a sewer system will be built

Township officials "say it's an embarassment to the neighborhood," she said. "But it's going to stay there until they prove to me it's illegal or tell me what else I can do.

"One said he'd come out personally and move it," she said. "I told him it weighs 200 pounds, and that he'd have 90 pounds of angry woman to contend with too. He didn't show up.

"For years we've tried to get the township officials out here to see for themselves what a mess this place is," she explained. "But we could never get them to budge from their offices.

"But 24 hours after they set up the john, everybody was here — health department, drain commissioner, township supervisor, zoning officials, even the highway department showed up."

Mrs. Bilby, her husband, Allen, their 6-year-old son, Brian, and some of the neighbors use the rented facility regularly.

"The way the septic tanks don't work," she said, "using facilities in the home is a health hazard."

Mrs. Bilby said none of her neighbors have complained to her about her lawn decoration

"Some of them have even asked me about renting their own," she said "But I don't think anybody else will unless the sewer plans fall through again."

She's paying $45 a month for the Port-A-John.

"It's the deluxe model. It's a chemical type and it flushes The company services it once a week. It's actually quite nice But there isn't a heater inside"

Fishermen Told To Quit Bugging Porpoises

Washington (UPI) — The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said it has told tuna fishermen to quit bugging porpoises.

The agency, a part of the Commerce Department, issued a new regulation prohibiting anyone to put a radio transmitter on the back of a porpoise.

It said it took the action because of reports that some fishermen were using the porpoises to help them track schools of tuna.

Soviets Lead Red Donors

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — New U.N. figures showed Sunday that the Soviet Union is once again the leading Communist donor of aid to developing countries after yielding that distinction briefly to China in 1970

Soviet bilateral aid equaled $791 million against China's $492 million in 1971 and $659 million against China's $287 million in 1972. China's 1970 commitments had outstripped the Soviet Union's $785 million to $197 million.

The statistics, stretching back to 1954, indicated that 1970 was the only year China led. For the entire 19 years, the Soviet Union gave $7.824 billion compared with China's $2.347 million.

Total aid for that period from China, the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland and Romania was $14.511 billion.

Forty-five countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America were listed as having received that aid. The biggest recipients were Egypt with $2.328 billion, India with $1 830 billion and Iran with $1.402 billion.

Iraq got $965 million, Indonesia $794 million, Algeria $707 million, Syria $587 million, Afghanistan $576 million, Chile $534 million, Brazil $372 million and Turkey $322 million

Last year the Communists' biggest aid commitments were $332 million to Chile, $317 million to Iran, $170 million to Algeria and $150 million to Egypt.

The bilateral aid by the eight Communist countries in the years 1970 and 1971 averaged $360 million from each of them, compared with $723 million given by each of 16 Western and industrialized countries.

The latter 16 countries in 1970 and 1971 gave $14 288 billion in development aid to developing countries or multilateral agencies

The United States gave the most — $6 244 billion France gave $2 01 billion, West Germany $1 267 billion, Japan $971 million, Britain $954 million, Canada $778 million, the Netherlands $410 million and Australia $404 million

None had yet achieved the aid target -- 0 7 per cent of their gross national product — the General Assembly has set for developed countries to reach by 1975, the mid-point of the Second U N. Development Decade

United States aid was 0 31 per cent in 1971 France gave 0 66 per cent and the Netherlands 0 60 per cent.

The figures were in reports prepared by the U N secretariat for the Committee for Development Planning The committee at a 12-day session starting here Monday, will assess progress of the second development decade

Congress To Debate Spending Restraints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The continuing clash between Congress and the Nixon administration over federal spending recurs in the Senate this week with scheduled debate on a spending ceiling and impoundment of funds.

On Tuesday, the Senate has set a vote on overriding President Nixon's veto of the $2.6 billion vocational rehabilitation bill

On Wednesday, it resumes debate on the dollar devaluation bill Various proposals have been made to tack on to the measure legislation that deals, in one way or another, with the spending and impoundment questions.

Two Democratic and two Republican senators joined Sunday in saying that any more to limit federal spending should include a provision to restrict the president's power to withhold funds voted by Congress.

Sens. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., Richard S Schweiker, R-Pa., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Jacob K Javits, R-N.Y., said the ceiling proposal should include provisions to make equal cuts in all programs should the limit be exceeded.

"If a ceiling on expenditures is adopted," they said, it should include the anti-impoundment provision which would require congressional approval before funds could be withheld to keep within the spending ceiling.

A proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., as modified by Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., would put a $265 billion a year ceiling on spending, some $3 7 billion less than President Nixon's budget, along with restriction of the percentage that could be impounded in any one program.

Another, by Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, and Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., would set a $268 7 billion spending ceiling, the budget figure, giving Congress 30 days in which to override presidential reductions and requiring these to be made on an equal percentage in all programs.

The Mondale-Schweiker amendment would set the spending ceiling at $263 billion with provisions that would adjust the level if tax reform is voted, require the same percentage cut in all programs and give Congress authority to approve both impoundments and pro rata cuts.

If the Senate musters the needed two-thirds vote Tuesday to override Nixon's veto of the vocational rehabilitation bill, the measure will go to the House where the result could be quite close

Whatever the result, this is likely to be only the first in a series of such tests The bill is merely an authorization bill which sets a ceiling on the program Actual funds would come later when Congress considers appropriations bills

#1535—2T, March 26, April 2

NOTICE
OFFER FOR FEDERAL-AID SECONDARY HIGHWAY HEARING

Pursuant to Federal laws and regulations the County Board of Commissioners of Lancaster County and the Nebraska Department of Roads offers an opportunity for a COMBINED CORRIDOR AND DESIGN public hearing on highway Project No. S-959(4) described as beginning at the southwest corner of Section 10-T12N-R6E and generally following the existing graveled road east along the section line approximately 2 miles to the southeast corner of Section 11-T12N-R6E, Agnew East.

The County Board and the Nebraska Department of Roads are required to solicit and consider fully a wide range of factors in determining highway locations and highway designs. Proposals of public and private interests will be extensively coordinated. Procedures are developed to give all interested persons an opportunity to become fully acquainted with highway proposals of concern to them, and an opportunity to express their views at those stages of a proposal's development when the flexibility to respond to these views still exists.

A report detailing the effect of this project on the local environment is submitted to Federal and State Agencies that may have an interest in the proposed improvement. This report is available upon request.

Therefore, the County Board of Commissioners of Lancaster County before giving its advice thereon extends an opportunity for a public hearing regarding this matter. If a public hearing is desired, a written request should be made to the County Clerk of Lancaster County, at Lincoln, Nebraska, on or before the 16th day of April, 1973. In the event a request for a public hearing is made, further notice of the time and place of such hearing will be given.

If a request for a hearing is not received, as herein stated, the County Board will complete its study of the matter and will give its advice thereon. You are requested to post this NOTICE in a conspicuous public place for the purpose of giving all political or governmental subdivisions or public corporations in your county an opportunity to know of this matter and to request a hearing, if desired.

Dated this 19th day of March, 1973.

Drug Arrests Up On Mexican Line

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Seizures of marijuana and other illegal drugs have increased sharply along the U.S.-Mexico border, and American officials are crediting Mexican authorities for much of the success.

Operation Cactus along the Arizona-Mexico border resulted in 125 arrests and the seizure of $20 million worth of marijuana, heroin and cocaine in a five-week period that ended in mid-March.

What was probably the biggest single haul so far this year came Feb. 14 when U.S. agents boarded a 160-ton ship in Los Angeles Harbor and confiscated 6.1 tons of marijuana with a street value they estimated at $4.1 million. Four men were arrested. The vessel — the Don Miguel, once used in filming the movie "Mr. Roberts," — had been towed by a tug from its home port of Mazatlan, Mexico.

The success of Operation Cactus has raised the possibility of similar large-scale attacks on smuggling elsewhere along the border.

"The beautiful thing about this (Operation Cactus) was the cooperation among the law enforcement agencies," said Phillip Jordan, special agent in charge of Arizona for the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. "Without the cooperation of U.S., Mexican and local authorities, this wouldn't be possible."

In Washington, Henry Price, a spokesman for the bureau, said, "Mexican cooperation is one of the main things now. The president and attorney general of Mexico want drug traffic through Mexico knocked off. They're going at this thing with determination."

He said the United States has provided Mexico with radios and with two helicopters for spotting fields of marijuana.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Raul A. Gonzales of Brownsville, Tex., says there has been a substantial increase in drug seizures by the U.S. Customs Service, and that he spends 70 per cent of his time prosecuting marijuana and other drug cases.

"What is frightening about this is that they (U.S. Customs) say they are only apprehending 10 per cent of the offenders," he added. "You have 90 per cent coming through. It's so easy to bring drugs across from Mexico by air or boat.

"We're not catching the big boys. We're catching the 'mules' and the 'runners.'"

Gonzales said that over the past five years he has noted that a different type of person is being prosecuted for marijuana smuggling. "The people who are being caught are persons with advanced college degrees, sons and daughters of professional people, sons and daughters of the respected families of our communities," he said. MORE

Cleburne Maier, director of Houston Customs Region VI, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and parts of Louisiana, says there has been a 49 per cent increase in seizures of marijuana and all types of dangerous drugs since 1967, reflecting an intensive effort to check more people, aircraft and automobiles and inspect them more carefully.

The region's total of 10,411 seizures in 1972 and 10,521 in 1971 compared with 6,886 in 1968. Most of the seizures were along the Texas and New Mexico borders.

Herman Moore, chief patrol agent of the U.S. Border Patrol, which covers 350 miles of international boundary in New Mexico and West Texas, said his agency seized about 1,000 pounds of marijauana in the week ended March 15 alone.

Seizures along the Arizona-Mexico border included 48,000 pounds of marijuana so far this year, compared with 10,000 pounds in the first three months of 1972, and 12 pounds of heroin this year against four pounds a year ago.

As a result, the customs service said, the price of marijuana has gone from $100 per kilo (2.2 pounds) last year to $200, and the price of heroin has risen from $500-$600 an ounce to $1,000-$1,100.

Seizures of marijuana in the border area extending from San Diego, Calif., to Yuma, Ariz., rose sharply in the six months ended in January 1972 from the corresponding period a year earlier, the Customs Service reported. Confiscation in the latest period totaled 825,050 ounces against 625,086 ounces in the prior period. But confiscations of heroin, cocaine and hash dropped.

Comparative figures for the six-month period ended January 1973 and a year earlier were: heroin 85.7 ounces and 150.2 ounces, cocaine 106.7 ounces and 135 ounces, and hashish 1,038.1 ounces and 1,893.6 ounces.

There was no immediate explanation for the decrease.

PORT-A-JOHN . . . for $45 a month. AP

Portable John Solves Septic Tank Problem

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Margaret Bilby has a portable outhouse sitting in her front yard.

Mrs. Bilby, 32, rented the privy Thursday because she said she was fed up with the high water level and failing septic tanks in her neighborhood — a subdivision of expensive, ranch-type homes with shaded streets and manicured lawns.

"If I have to," she said, "I'm going to put a sign on it: 'Summit Township Sewer System.'"

Jack Ellison, township zoning administrator, said he's told Mrs. Bilby he believes the structure is illegal. But he hasn't gotten a court order to make her move it.

She said other officials — most irate, indignant and embarassed and some sympathetic — have promised that a sewer system will be built.

Township officials "say it's an embarassment to the neighborhood," she said. "But it's going to stay there until they prove to me it's illegal or tell me what else I can do.

"One said he'd come out personally and move it," she said. "I told him it weighs 200 pounds, and that he'd have 90 pounds of angry woman to contend with too. He didn't show up.

"For years we've tried to get the township officials out here to see for themselves what a mess this place is," she explained. "But we could never get them to budge from their offices.

"But 24 hours after they set up the john, everybody was here — health department, drain commissioner, township supervisor, zoning officials, even the highway department showed up."

Mrs. Bilby, her husband, Allen, their 6-year-old son, Brian, and some of the neighbors use the rented facility regularly.

"The way the septic tanks don't work," she said, "using facilities in the home is a health hazard."

Mrs. Bilby said none of her neighbors have complained to her about her lawn decoration.

"Some of them have even asked me about renting their own," she said. "But I don't think anybody else will unless the sewer plans fall through again."

She's paying $45 a month for the Port-A-John.

"It's the deluxe model. It's a chemical type and it flushes. The company services it once a week. It's actually quite nice. But there isn't a heater inside."

Fishermen Told To Quit Bugging Porpoises

Washington (UPI) — The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said it has told tuna fishermen to quit bugging porpoises.

The agency, a part of the Commerce Department, issued a new regulation prohibiting anyone to put a radio transmitter on the back of a porpoise.

It said it took the action because of reports that some fishermen were using the porpoises to help them track schools of tuna.

Soviets Lead Red Donors

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — New U.N. figures showed Sunday that the Soviet Union is once again the leading Communist donor of aid to developing countries after yielding that distinction briefly to China in 1970.

Soviet bilateral aid equaled $791 million against China's $492 million in 1971 and $659 million against China's $287 million in 1972. China's 1970 commitments had outstripped the Soviet Union's $785 million to $197 million.

The statistics, stretching back to 1954, indicated that 1970 was the only year China led. For the entire 19 years, the Soviet Union gave $7.824 billion compared with China's $2.347 million.

Total aid for that period from China, the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland and Romania was $14.511 billion.

Forty-five countries of Africa, Asia and Latin America were listed as having received that aid. The biggest recipients were Egypt with $2.328 billion, India with $1.830 billion and Iran with $1.402 billion.

Iraq got $965 million, Indonesia $794 million, Algeria $707 million, Syria $587 million, Adghanistan $576 million, Chile $534 million, Brazil $372 million and Turkey $322 million.

Last year the Communists' biggest aid commitments were $332 million to Chile, $317 million to Iran, $170 million to Algeria and $150 million to Egypt.

The bilateral aid by the eight Communist countries in the years 1970 and 1971 averaged $360 million from each of them, compared with $723 million given by each of 16 Western and industrialized countries.

The latter 16 countries in 1970 and 1971 gave $14.288 billion in development aid to developing countries or multilateral agencies.

The United States gave the most — $6.244 billion. France gave $2.01 billion, West Germany $1.267 billion, Japan $971 million, Britain $954 million, Canada $778 million, the Netherlands $410 million and Australia $404 million.

None had yet achieved the aid target — 0.7 per cent of their gross national product — the General Assembly has set for developed countries to reach by 1975, the mid-point of the Second U.N. Development Decade.

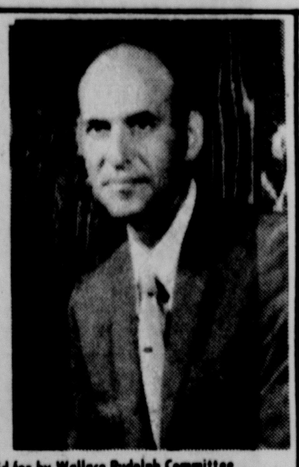

United States aid was 0.31 per cent in 1971. France gave 0.66 per cent and the Netherlands 0.60 per cent.

The figures were in reports prepared by the U.N. secretariat for the Committee for Development Planning. The committee, at a 12-day session starting here Monday, will assess progress of the second development decade.

Congress To Debate Spending Restraints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The continuing clash between Congress and the Nixon administration over federal spending recurs in the Senate this week with scheduled debate on a spending ceiling and impoundment of funds.

On Tuesday, the Senate has set a vote on overriding President Nixon's veto of the $2.6 billion vocational rehabilitation bill.

On Wednesday, it resumes debate on the dollar devaluation bill. Various proposals have been made to tack on to the measure legislation that deals, in one way or another, with the spending and impoundment questions.

Two Democratic and two Republican senators joined Sunday in saying that any more to limit federal spending should include a provision to restrict the president's power to withhold funds voted by Congress.

Sens. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said the ceiling proposal should include provisions to make equal cuts in all programs should the limit be exceeded.

"If a ceiling on expenditures is adopted," they said, it should include the anti-impoundment provision which would require congressional approval before funds could be withheld to keep within the spending ceiling.

A proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., as modified by Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Tex., would put a $265 billion a year ceiling on spending, some $3.7 billion less than President Nixon's budget, along with restriction of the percentage that could be impounded in any one program.

Another, by Sen. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, and Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., would set a $268.7 billion spending ceiling, the budget figure, giving Congress 30 days in which to override presidential reductions and requiring these to be made on an equal percentage in all programs.

The Mondale-Schweiker amendment would set the spending ceiling at $263 billion with provisions that would adjust the level if tax reform is voted, require the same percentage cut in all programs and give Congress authority to approve both impoundments and pro rata cuts.

If the Senate musters the needed two-thirds vote Tuesday to override Nixon's veto of the vocational rehabilitation bill, the measure will go to the House where the result could be quite close.

Whatever the result, this is likely to be only the first in a series of such tests. The bill is merely an authorization bill which sets a ceiling on the program. Actual funds would come later when Congress considers appropriations bills.

TIME OUT

By Steve Gillispie
Star Sports Writer

Norfolk's Mueting MVP

Joe Mueting, who led Norfolk Catholic to second place in Class C at the Nebraska State High School Basketball Tournament last year, was chosen the most valuable player on the unbeaten South Dakota University junior varsity basketball team.

The 6-8 freshman was a Class C all-stater and was given the MVP honor, as well as the best effort award, by a vote of his Coyote teammates.

Mueting averaged 17.6 points and 7.9 rebounds in leading SDU's junior varsity to a 14-0 record. He also was a spot reliever for the Coyote varsity and is expected to start next season for SDU's varsity.

Laurel graduate Brent Fahnestock finished his career as a basketball player for the Coyotes and is now ranked on the school's all-time top ten in scoring and rebounding.

Fahnestock ended with 1,192 points, fourth on the all-time chart and 528 rebounds, good for eighth.

Pleasanton junior Henry Heider was selected for the Outstanding College Athletes in America list. Heider was the most valuable defensive back in the North Central Conference for South Dakota University last fall.

Lincoln East graduate Barry Blue, who's on the Coyotes baseball team as a pitcher, will be battling for the starting quarterback position this fall.

Fairbury graduate Tom Gunlicks suffered a foot injury late in the basketball season and may miss long jumping for Augustana's track team. Weightman Steve Schwarten, Emerson, is listed on Augustana's track team roster.

Kearney's Evans Recovered

Grand Island sophomore Randy Evans has recovered from a broken neck, which he suffered last fall as a starting quarterback for Kearney State.

Evans is starting at third base for the Antelope baseball team and is leading the club in home runs, RBIs and tied for the most hits. He's also expected to win back the starting job at quarterback this fall.

Nebraska Wesleyan junior Lee Newcomer has realized a goal by being accepted into medical school. The York graduate, who held the record in the mile (4:14.7) before Ron Greeno recently broke it, passed up a scholarship to an Ivy League school to attend NWU.

Newcomer is the second Plainsmen athlete in two years to be accepted into medical school during his junior year.

Wahoo graduate Dick French was picked last year and bypassed his senior season on the NWU basketball team to start medical school. French was the team's second-leading scorer his junior year.

Newcomer set the school record during his freshman year, but had major back surgery that summer and wasn't back to full strength last season. However, he's expected to be at peak form this spring for his last season for NWU.

Former Plainsman athletic student trainer Jerry Howe, Kearney, has also been accepted into medical school this year.

GREENSBORO LEAD TIED

Graham Knots Casper At 199

... FINAL ROUND MONDAY

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Billy Casper fell back into a tie for the lead and Arnold Palmer fell into a creek Sunday in the rain-delayed third round of the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Casper, who held the lead alone at the end of Friday's second round, slogged through mud and slop for a 68 but was caught at 14-under-par 199 by veteran Lou Graham. Graham fashioned a 67 on the 7,021 yards of mud and goo that make up the Sedgefield Country Club course.

Little Chi Chi Rodriguez had a 67 and was alone in third place at 201 going into Monday's final round of this weather-plagued event.

A 1½-inch rain canceled Saturday's play and a double round of 36 holes was scheduled Sunday. The course was still under water Sunday morning, however, and only the afternoon half of the 36 holes was able to be played.

Palmer had a 70 despite a dunking on the ninth hole when he flipped from a narrow foot bridge into waist-deep water. He scraped his right wrist when grabbing for a metal support but the greatest damage was to his dignity

"It's the silliest I ever felt in my life," Palmer said after posting a 207 total.

Lee Elder, who needs to win here to become the first black player ever to compete in the famed Masters tournament, remained within striking distance. Elder had a 68 and at 204 was only five strokes away.

Lee Trevino, winner of two of his last three starts, couldn't keep pace. He had a 69 but at 206 was seven strokes out of the lead

The rains, coming on top of more than a week of steady showers, left the course a quagmire and had the players fighting for footholds despite their spikes.

"I think it's as wet as I've ever seen it," said Palmer. "I was ankle deep in mud just going up the fairway."

Winter rules were in effect, with the players being allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairways and through the greens. They still had problems.

"Sometimes, you couldn't find any place in the fairway to place the ball that wasn't under water," said Graham.

JFK Defends Crown

GALLUP, N M (AP) — John F. Kennedy College broke open a tie game in the third quarter Saturday night by outscoring Raytown 19-8 as the Patriettes captured their second consecutive National AAU Women's Basketball Championship with a 59-52 victory

The Piperettes outscored Kennedy 18-14 in a fourth-quarter spurt, but could not draw even.

Kennedy was paced by the offensive efforts of Barbara Wischmeier and Linda White, who combined for 30 points and produced dominating ball control

Patriette July Brazinski, named the tournament's most valuable player, registered eight points while also producing an outstanding defensive effort, stealing the ball and breaking up Piperette passes

Raytown, which ran neck and neck with the defending champions for the first two quarters, carrying a 26-26 tie into the second half, got double-figure scoring efforts from three players

Pat Ramsey paced the Piperettes with 14 points, eight of them from the free throw line, while Pam Mindemann added 12 tallies and Marcia Cantrell 11

Earlier Saturday evening, the unseeded Crestettes of Allentown, Pa., knocked off third-seeded Parsons College of Fairfield, Iowa, 66-61, to claim third place.

Bullets Fall To Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl "The Pearl" said he didn't sleep well Saturday night because he was concentrating deeply on Sunday's National Basketball Association Eastern Conference game against the Baltimore Bullets

But the electrifying Monroe was wide awake Sunday, firing in a season-high 32 points as the New York Knicks destroyed the Bullets 123-103 for their second consecutive victory in the series

"I was kind of nervous and edgy," he said, "because I don t usually play well in afternoon games I spent a lost of sleepless moments thinking about the game

"It was unusual for me to stay awake so long, because I am a relatively passive person and fall asleep easily "

Monroe and Walt Frazier, who added 29 points for New York, combined to break open the game with a devastating flourish in the second half.

During the last eight minutes of the third period until halfway through the fourth quarter they teamed for 30 of New York's 32 points Monroe, who hit only four of 11 field goal attempts in the first half, connected on eight of nine shots in the final two periods

Lincoln To Host Softball Meet

Lincoln will again host the AA men's fast pitch softball tournament at Ballard Field, it was announced Sunday.

The annual Nebraska State Softball Association meeting concluded Sunday with tourney site announcements and softball awards

Harold Simpson of Lincoln won the Jim Lewis Award for his contribution to men's softball while Robert Valentine of Aurora earned the Jim Hall Award as the outstanding women's softball coach.

Other meet sites include men's A fast pitch, Kearney, men's AA slow pitch, Blair; women's AA slow pitch, Blair, women's A fast pitch, Columbus and girls' high school, Grand Island

Pearson Wins Atlanta 500

HAMPTON, Ga (UPI) — David Pearson drove his Wood Brothers Mercury to an easy two-lap victory in the Atlanta 500 Sunday when overheating problems knocked Cale Yarborough out of contention after the two had staged a dizzling duel for most of the race

Campbell Gains Boxing Title

Lexington — Jeff Campbell of Waverly won the state 178-pound Silver Gloves Boxing championship here this weekend.

The 15-year-old Waverly fighter decisioned Kevin Wetovick of District 3 (Hastings area) and scored a second-round TKO over Brian Eby of District 1 (Norfolk area)

Campbell will be a member of the Nebraska Silver Gloves team which will compete against a South Dakota team at Winner, S D April 14

Husker Rowers Conclude Trip

Huntsville, Ala — Nebraska's rowing team concluded its southern trip here Sunday afternoon in a pair of races against Alabama

NU's varsity four-man shell defeated Alabama over the 2,000-meter course in a match race by 15 seconds

The Huskers' eight-man shell lost over the same distance to the Alabamans by 10 seconds

NU Baseball Test Canceled

Nebraska's baseball doubleheader originally scheduled Monday afternoon at the NU Diamond against South Dakota State has been canceled because of wet grounds

Nebraska coach Tony Sharpe's crew has been unable to play its last 10 scheduled games because of rain

"We can't even go outside and practice because of all this rain," he said "I wish it would dry up so we could at least practice It's been an awful spring so far "

The Huskers travel to Kansas for a Friday doubleheader and a Saturday single game. That series will open the Big Eight season for NU since the Iowa State series was rained out in Lincoln last weekend

Astros Against Angels?—Nevada Oddsmakers Disagree

By MILTON RICHMAN

New York (UPI) — You go by Las Vegas or Reno, fine, then that means you're looking to see either the Pirates or Reds in the World Series with either the White Sox or Yankees.

I think the oddsmakers do a lot of work and a lot of figuring before coming out with their quotations. They try to take everything possible into account, but frequently they still wind up wrong.

How can anybody foresee tendonitis in the arm or a broken leg? No oddsmaker can, no doctor can.

So when it comes to making selections, I try to consider some of the variables and with those in mind, I like the Houston Astros in the National League and the California Angels in the American.

Remember, I don't say run out and bet all your money on them. I merely say I like them to win.

You want to break it down finer? Okay. Here it is

National League		American League
East	West	East	West
St Louis	Houston	Baltimore	California
Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	New York	Chicago
Montreal	San Francisco	Boston	Oakland
New York	Los Angeles	Detroit	Kansas City
Chicago	Atlanta	Cleveland	Texas
Philadelphia	San Diego	Milwaukee	Minnesota

The first question you may have is why Houston? Fair enough.

Most people reckon the Reds are the club with all the horses in the NL West and most of those people could be right, but every year this time I look for certain little signs and I think I've seen some already.

Like this could be one of those Leo Durocher years. And what is one of those Leo Durocher years? Well, for example:

Marvin Miller holds a meeting with Leo's players, a meeting for which he has full authorization Durocher busts up the meeting and Miller is on the verge of saying something that wouldn't make Durocher look especially good, but he doesn't. Score one for Leo

Then Durocher is fined $250 for his action by NL president Chub Feeney and Leo says he'll quit before paying it. He hasn't paid the $250 yet. I checked with Feeney and he says he isn't worried. Neither is Durocher. Score two for him

To me, this has some of the earmarks of Leo's 1954 season with the Giants. Everything went right for him, everything fell into place. You'd look up and there was Dusty Rhodes delivering another pinch hit or Ruben Gomez winning a ball game no one figured he would. The Giants won the pennant of course, then went on to wipe out Cleveland in the World Series four in a row.

That's what you call one of those Leo Durocher years

Moreover, he has a sound ball club with Houston. In 22-year-old Cesar Cedeno, he has the closest thing to the next Roberto Clemente. He also has such solid bats as Lee May's, Jimmy Wynn's, Bob Watson's and Doug Rader's not to mention an excellent double play combination in Roger Metzger and Tommy Helms, a decent pitching staff and a strengthened bench with the addition of Tommie Agee.

The Cardinals have some excellent punch at the plate with Joe Torre, Lou Brock, Ted Simmons and Tim McCarver and their pitching could be even stronger with Bob Gibson, Scipio Spinks, Rick Wise, Reggie Cleveland, Al Santorini and Jim Bibby. My only question about the Cards is their defense.

Watch Montreal. I think Gene Mauch is going to move the Expos up a few notches this year His pitching could be stronger, but then you can't have everything.

Over in the American League, I'm taking a flyer on the Angels for four reasons. One I like that deal they made with the Dodgers, two I think their new manager, Bobby Winkles, has a way of getting the most out of people who work for him; three, any ball club that has Frank Robinson always has a chance, and four, Harry Dalton, to my way of thinking, is the No. 1 front office man in baseball today. Never mind that last trade he made — how about the one before that, Nolan Ryan plus three others for who?

I've never run into a more enthusiastic ball club than the White Sox, or two buys who work better together than Chuck Tanner and Roland Hemond. Now if one of them could only pitch.

If there's a way of getting the Rangers out of the cellar, Whitey Herzog will find it. His mind is always open. So is Frank Quilici's, but he simply doesn't have a lot with which to work with the Twins

The last time I saw Earl Weaver he told me he was worried about Baltimore's hitting, but it'll very likely come around with guys like Earl Williams, Bobby Grich, Merv Rettenmund, Don Baylor, Brooks Robinson and Boog Powell, and so will the Orioles.

No question the Yankees are stronger, but I wouldn't say that about their pitching. Everybody's wondering how Mike Kekich and Fritz Peterson will do. I think they'll do fine, maybe win even more than they did last year. Sparky Lyle is another story. I don't think he'll have anywhere near the year he had last year.

When you tell Billy Martin his Tigers are getting old, he says that's what everybody said last year Maybe so, but that doesn't change things. The Tigers are even older this year than they were last

I wouldn't be too surprised if the Indians move up, but I would if the Brewers do. They've got a long way to go, and they ain't gonna make it in the next six months

Norfolk's Mueting MVP

Joe Mueting, who led Norfolk Catholic to second place in Class C at the Nebraska State High School Basketball Tournament last year, was chosen the most valuable player on the unbeaten South Dakota University junior varsity basketball team.

The 6-8 freshman was a Class C all-stater and was given the MVP honor, as well as the best effort award, by a vote of his Coyote teammates.

Mueting averaged 17.6 points and 7.9 rebounds in leading SDU's junior varsity to a 14-0 record. He also was a spot reliever for the Coyote varsity and is expected to start next season for SDU's varsity.

Laurel graduate Brent Fahnestock finished his career as a basketball player for the Coyotes and is now ranked on the school's all-time top ten in scoring and rebounding.

Fahnestock ended with 1,192 points, fourth on the all-time chart and 528 rebounds, good for eighth.

Pleasanton junior Henry Heider was selected for the Outstanding College Athletes in America list. Heider was the most valuable defensive back in the North Central Conference for South Dakota University last fall.

Lincoln East graduate Barry Blue, who's on the Coyotes baseball team as a pitcher, will be battling for the starting quarterback position this fall.

Fairbury graduate Tom Gunlicks suffered a foot injury late in the basketball season and may miss long jumping for Augustana's track team. Weightman Steve Schwarten, Emerson, is listed on Augustana's track team roster.

Kearney's Evans Recovered

Grand Island sophomore Randy Evans has recovered from a broken neck, which he suffered last fall as a starting quarterback for Kearney State.

Evans is starting at third base for the Antelope baseball team and is leading the club in home runs, RBIs and tied for the most hits. He's also expected to win back the starting job at quarterback this fall.

Nebraska Wesleyan junior Lee Newcomer has realized a goal by being accepted into medical school. The York graduate, who held the record in the mile (4:14.7) before Ron Greeno recently broke it, passed up a scholarship to an Ivy League school to attend NWU.

Newcomer is the second Plainsmen athlete in two years to be accepted into medical school during his junior year.

Wahoo graduate Dick French was picked last year and bypassed his senior season on the NWU basketball team to start medical school. French was the team's second-leading scorer his junior year.

Newcomer set the school record during his freshman year, but had major back surgery that summer and wasn't back to full strength last season. However, he's expected to be at peak form this spring for his last season for NWU.

Former Plainsman athletic student trainer Jerry Howe, Kearney, has also been accepted into medical school this year.

Graham Knots Casper At 199

... FINAL ROUND MONDAY

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Billy Casper fell back into a tie for the lead and Arnold Palmer fell into a creek Sunday in the rain-delayed third round of the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Casper, who held the lead alone at the end of Friday's second round, slogged through mud and slop for a 68 but was caught at 14-under-par 199 by veteran Lou Graham. Graham fashioned a 67 on the 7,021 yards of mud and goo that make up the Sedgefield Country Club course.

Little Chi Chi Rodriguez had a 67 and was alone in third place at 201 going into Monday's final round of this weather-plagued event.

A 1½-inch rain canceled Saturday's play and a double round of 36 holes was scheduled Sunday. The course was still under water Sunday morning, however, and only the afternoon half of the 36 holes was able to be played.

Palmer had a 70 despite a dunking on the ninth hole when he flipped from a narrow foot bridge into waist-deep water. He scraped his right wrist when grabbing for a metal support but the greatest damage was to his dignity.

"It's the silliest I ever felt in my life," Palmer said after posting a 207 total.

Lee Elder, who needs to win here to become the first black player ever to compete in the famed Masters tournament, remained within striking distance. Elder had a 68 and at 204 was only five strokes away.

Lee Trevino, winner of two of his last three starts, couldn't keep pace. He had a 69 but at 206 was seven strokes out of the lead.

The rains, coming on top of more than a week of steady showers, left the course a quagmire and had the players fighting for footholds despite their spikes.

"I think it's as wet as I've ever seen it," said Palmer. "I was ankle deep in mud just going up the fairway."

Winter rules were in effect, with the players being allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairways and through the greens. They still had problems.

"Sometimes, you couldn't find any place in the fairway to place the ball that wasn't under water," said Graham.

Lincoln To Host Softball Meet

Lincoln will again host the AA men's fast pitch softball tournament at Ballard Field, it was announced Sunday.

The annual Nebraska State Softball Association meeting concluded Sunday with tourney site announcements and softball awards.

Harold Simpson of Lincoln won the Jim Lewis Award for his contribution to men's softball while Robert Valentine of Aurora earned the Jim Hall Award as the outstanding women's softball coach.

Other meet sites include men's A fast pitch, Kearney; men's AA slow pitch, Blair; women's AA slow pitch, Blair; women's A fast pitch, Columbus and girls' high school, Grand Island.

Pearson Wins Atlanta 500

HAMPTON, Ga. (UPI) — David Pearson drove his Wood Brothers Mercury to an easy two-lap victory in the Atlanta 500 Sunday when overheating problems knocked Cale Yarborough out of contention after the two had staged a dizzling duel for most of the race.

Campbell Gains Boxing Title

Lexington — Jeff Campbell of Waverly won the state 178-pound Silver Gloves Boxing championship here this weekend.

The 15-year-old Waverly fighter decisioned Kevin Wetovick of District 3 (Hastings area) and scored a second-round TKO over Brian Eby of District 1 (Norfolk area).

Campbell will be a member of the Nebraska Silver Gloves team which will compete against a South Dakota team at Winner, S.D. April 14.

Husker Rowers Conclude Trip

Huntsville, Ala. — Nebraska's rowing team concluded its southern trip here Sunday afternoon in a pair of races against Alabama.

NU's varsity four-man shell defeated Alabama over the 2,000-meter course in a match race by 15 seconds.

The Huskers' eight-man shell lost over the same distance to the Alabamans by 10 seconds.

NU Baseball Test Canceled

Nebraska's baseball doubleheader originally scheduled Monday afternoon at the NU Diamond against South Dakota State has been canceled because of wet grounds.

Nebraska coach Tony Sharpe's crew has been unable to play its last 10 scheduled games because of rain.

"We can't even go outside and practice because of all this rain," he said. "I wish it would dry up so we could at least practice. It's been an awful spring so far."

The Huskers travel to Kansas for a Friday doubleheader and a Saturday single game. That series will open the Big Eight season for NU since the Iowa State series was rained out in Lincoln last weekend.

Lincoln Team Earns 5th

Seminole, Fla. — Lincoln's Little Fry basketball entry in the national tournament, the Salvation Army All-Stars, captured fifth place here Sunday with a pair of wins.

The Lincoln contingent lost to Harlem N.Y., 45-41, Saturday but advanced to the consolation championship with a 45-42 overtime victory over Chicago Heights Sunday afternoon.

The All-Stars earned fifth with a 56-44 triumph over the Puerto Rican Islands Sunday night. The Lincoln crew was second in the national tourney last year.

Gervin Sparks Virginia Win

JFK Defends Crown

GALLUP, N.M. (AP) — John F. Kennedy College broke open a tie game in the third quarter Saturday night by outscoring Raytown 19-8 as the Patriettes captured their second consecutive National AAU Women's Basketball Championship with a 59-52 victory.

The Piperettes outscored Kennedy 18-14 in a fourth-quarter spurt, but could not draw even.

Kennedy was paced by the offensive efforts of Barbara Wischmeier and Linda White, who combined for 30 points and produced dominating ball control.

Patriette July Brazinski, named the tournament's most valuable player, registered eight points while also producing an outstanding defensive effort, stealing the ball and breaking up Piperette passes.

Raytown, which ran neck and neck with the defending champions for the first two quarters, carrying a 26-26 tie into the second half, got double-figure scoring efforts from three players.

Pat Ramsey paced the Piperettes with 14 points, eight of them from the free throw line, while Pam Mindemann added 12 tallies and Marcia Cantrell 11.

Earlier Saturday evening, the unseeded Crestettes of Allentown, Pa., knocked off third-seeded Parsons College of Fairfield, Iowa, 66-61, to claim third place.

Bullets Fall To Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl "The Pearl" said he didn't sleep well Saturday night because he was concentrating deeply on Sunday's National Basketball Association Eastern Conference game against the Baltimore Bullets.

But the electrifying Monroe was wide awake Sunday, firing in a season-high 32 points as the New York Knicks destroyed the Bullets 123-103 for their second conscutive victory in the series.

"I was kind of nervous and edgy," he said, "because I don't usually play well in afternoon games. I spent a lost of sleepless moments thinking about the game.

"It was unusual for me to stay awake so long, because I am a relatively passive person and fall asleep easily."

Monroe and Walt Frazier, who added 29 points for New York, combined to break open the game with a devastating flourish in the second half.

During the last eight minutes of the third period until halfway through the fourth quarter they teamed for 30 of New York's 32 points. Monroe, who hit only four of 11 field goal attempts in the first half, connected on eight of nine shots in the final two periods.

Astros Against Angels?—Nevada Oddsmakers Disagree

By MILTON RICHMAN

New York (UPI) — You go by Las Vegas or Reno, fine, then that means you're looking to see either the Pirates or Reds in the World Series with either the White Sox or Yankees.

I think the oddsmakers do a lot of work and a lot of figuring before coming out with their quotations. They try to take everything possible into account, but frequently they still wind up wrong.

How can anybody foresee tendonitis in the arm or a broken leg? No oddsmaker can; no doctor can.

So when it comes to making selections, I try to consider some of the variables and with those in mind, I like the Houston Astros in the National League and the California Angels in the American.

Remember, I don't say run out and bet all your money on them. I merely say I like them to win.

You want to break it down finer? Okay. Here it is:

National East	National West	American East	American West
St. Louis	Houston	Baltimore	California
Pittsburgh	Cincinnati	New York	Chicago
Montreal	San Francisco	Boston	Oakland
New York	Los Angeles	Detroit	Kansas City
Chicago	Atlanta	Cleveland	Texas
Philadelphia	San Diego	Milwaukee	Minnesota

The first question you may have is why Houston? Fair enough.

Most people reckon the Reds are the club with all the horses in the NL West and most of those people could be right, but every year this time I look for certain little signs and I think I've seen some already.

Like this could be one of those Leo Durocher years. And what is one of those Leo Durocher years? Well, for example:

Marvin Miller holds a meeting with Leo's players, a meeting for which he has full authorization. Durocher busts up the meeting and Miller is on the verge of saying something that wouldn't make Durocher look especially good, but he doesn't. Score one for Leo.

Then Durocher is fined $250 for his action by NL president Chub Feeney and Leo says he'll quit before paying it. He hasn't paid the $250 yet. I checked with Feeney and he says he isn't worried. Neither is Durocher. Score two for him.

To me, this has some of the earmarks of Leo's 1954 season with the Giants. Everything went right for him, everything fell into place. You'd look up and there was Dusty Rhodes delivering another pinch hit or Ruben Gomez winning a ball game no one figured he would. The Giants won the pennant of course, then went on to wipe out Cleveland in the World Series four in a row.

That's what you call one of those Leo Durocher years.

Moreover, he has a sound ball club with Houston. In 22-year-old Cesar Cedeno, he has the closest thing to the next Roberto Clemente. He also has such solid bats as Lee May's, Jimmy Wynn's, Bob Watson's and Doug Rader's not to mention an excellent double play combination in Roger Metzger and Tommy Helms, a decent pitching staff and a strengthened bench with the addition of Tommie Agee.

The Cardinals have some excellent punch at the plate with Joe Torre, Lou Brock, Ted Simmons and Tim McCarver and their pitching could be even stronger with Bob Gibson, Scipio Spinks, Rick Wise, Reggie Cleveland, Al Santorini and Jim Bibby. My only question about the Cards is their defense.

Watch Montreal. I think Gene Mauch is going to move the Expos up a few notches this year. His pitching could be stronger, but then you can't have everything.

Over in the American League, I'm taking a flyer on the Angels for four reasons. One I like that deal they made with the Dodgers; two I think their new manager, Bobby Winkles, has a way of getting the most out of people who work for him; three, any ball club that has Frank Robinson always has a chance, and four, Harry Dalton, to my way of thinking, is the No. 1 front office man in baseball today. Never mind that last trade he made — how about the one before that, Nolan Ryan plus three others for who?

I've never run into a more enthusiastic ball club than the White Sox, or two buys who work better together than Chuck Tanner and Roland Hemond. Now if one of them could only pitch.

If there's a way of getting the Rangers out of the cellar, Whitey Herzog will find it. His mind is always open. So is Frank Quilici's, but he simply doesn't have a lot with which to work with the Twins.

The last time I saw Earl Weaver he told me he was worried about Baltimore's hitting, but it'll very likely come around with guys like Earl Williams, Bobby Grich, Merv Rettenmund, Don Baylor, Brooks Robinson and Boog Powell, and so will the Orioles.

No question the Yankees are stronger, but I wouldn't say that about their pitching. Everybody's wondering how Mike Kekich and Fritz Peterson will do. I think they'll do fine, maybe win even more than they did last year. Sparky Lyle is another story. I don't think he'll have anywhere near the year he had last year.

When you tell Billy Martin his Tigers are getting old, he says that's what everybody said last year. Maybe so, but that doesn't change things. The Tigers are even older this year than they were last.

I wouldn't be too surprised if the Indians move up, but I would if the Brewers do. They've got a long way to go, and they ain't gonna make it in the next six months.

Shutouts Spice Action In Exhibition Baseball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Montreal's Ernie McAnally hurled eight innings of four-hit baseball Sunday, outdueling National League Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton as the Expos defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0 in an exhibition game.

McAnally retired the first 15 batters before Bob Boone broke the spell with a single.

Carlton gave up one run and four hits in seven innings. The run came in the fourth after he walked two men and Bob Bailey singled. Ken Singleton homered off reliever Barry Lersch in the ninth.

There were several other shutouts along the exhibition trail.

Stan Bahnsen pitched six shutout innings and smacked a double to set up both runs as the Chicago White Sox beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0.

Steve Dunning hurled six innings and Mike Hedlund and Ed Farmer completed a seven-hitter and Jerry Kenney drove in both runs with an infield out and a double as the Cleveland Indians defeated the San Diego Padres 2-0.

The San Francisco Giants rapped Oakland's Vida Blue for seven runs in five innings en route to a 10-9 victory over the A's. Blue, who was a holdout until last week, was shelled for 10 hits, including two triples and four doubles.

Ben Oglivie triggered a three-run third inning with the first of his three hits and the Boston Red Sox held on for a 6-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers despite a pair of homers by the losers' Willie Horton. Oglivie ignited the third inning with a double. Later he added two singles.

Horton, fined Thursday night for leaving the park during a game against Boston, homered off Marty Pattin in the sixth and off Don Newhauser in the eighth.

Home runs by Johnny Bench, Larry Stahl and Cesar Geronimo accounted for all of Cincinnati's runs as the Reds defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1.

Rookie George Theodore, who walked with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to force in the tying run, singled home Felix Millan from second base with two out in the 13th to give the New York Mets a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Don Money collected five hits in as many times at bat and Joe Lahoud drove in two runs with three hits, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to an 8-4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Bob Darwin hit two homers to drive in all of Minnesota's runs as the Twins defeated the Houston Astros 3-2.

Elliott Maddox and Vic Harris hit home runs and Rico Carty drove in three runs with a double and single as the Texas Rangers defeated the Kansas City Royals 8-6.

Nolan Ryan went all the way, hurling a two-hitter, as the California Angels edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1. Ryan, who won 19 games last year as the major league strikeout leader, fanned eight and allowed only two singles.

Golden State Trips Bucks

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors survived the loss of Rick Barry and the furious charge of the Milwaukee Bucks to post a 9592 victory Sunday afternoon and even their best-of-seven playoff series at one game apiece.

Cazzie Russell replaced Barry when the all-star Warrior forward sprained an ankle just two minutes after the started and led Golden State to the win with 25 points.

The Bucks railed 82-71 early in the fourth quarter but started a comeback that fell just short. Milwaukee drew to within eight points at 93-85 with 1:35 left. Lucius Allen and a three-point play by Oscar Robinson pulled the Bucks to within one point at 93-92 with 14 seconds left.

Shutouts Spice Action In Exhibition Baseball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Montreal's Ernie McAnally hurled eight innings of four-hit baseball Sunday, outdueling National League Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton as the Expos defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0 in an exhibition game.

McAnally retired the first 15 batters before Bob Boone broke the spell with a single.

Carlton gave up one run and four hits in seven innings. The run came in the fourth after he walked two men and Bob Bailey singled. Ken Singleton homered off reliever Barry Lersch in the ninth.

There were several other shutouts along the exhibition trail.

Stan Bahnsen pitched six shutout innings and smacked a double to set up both runs as the Chicago White Sox beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0.

Steve Dunning hurled six innings and Mike Hedlund and Ed Farmer completed a seven-hitter and Jerry Kenney drove in both runs with an infield out and a double as the Cleveland Indians defeated the San Diego Padres 2-0.

The San Francisco Giants rapped Oakland's Vida Blue for seven runs in five innings en route to a 10-9 victory over the A's. Blue, who was a holdout until last week, was shelled for 10 hits, including two triples and four doubles.

Ben Oglivie triggered a three-run third inning with the first of his three hits and the Boston Red Sox held on for a 6-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers despite a pair of homers by the losers' Willie Horton. Oglivie ignited the third inning with a double. Later he added two singles.

Horton, fined Thursday night for leaving the park during a game against Boston, homered off Marty Pattin in the sixth and off Don Newhauser in the eighth.

Home runs by Johnny Bench, Larry Stahl and Cesar Geronimo accounted for all of Cincinnati's runs as the Reds defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1.

Rookie George Theodore, who walked with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to force in the tying run, singled home Felix Millan from second base with two out in the 13th to give the New York Mets a 4-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Don Money collected five hits in as many times at bat and Joe Lahoud drove in two runs with three hits, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to an 8-4 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Bob Darwin hit two homers to drive in all of Minnesota's runs as the Twins defeated the Houston Astros 3-2.

Elliott Maddox and Vic Harris hit home runs and Rico Carty drove in three runs with a double and single as the Texas Rangers defeated the Kansas City Royals 8-6.

Nolan Ryan went all the way, hurling a two-hitter, as the California Angels edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1. Ryan, who won 19 games last year as the major league strikeout leader, fanned eight and allowed only two singles.

Golden State Trips Bucks

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors survived the loss of Rick Barry and the furious charge of the Milwaukee Bucks to post a 9592 victory Sunday afternoon and even their best-of-seven playoff series at one game apiece.

Cazzie Russell replaced Barry when the all-star Warrior forward sprained an ankle just two minutes after the started and led Golden State to the win with 25 points.

The Bucks railed 82-71 early in the fourth quarter but started a comeback that fell just short. Milwaukee drew to within eight points at 93-85 with 1:35 left. Lucius Allen and a three-point play by Oscar Robinson pulled the Bucks to within one point at 93-92 with 14 seconds left.

Ali's Pain 'Overwhelming'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The doctor who performed the surgery on Muhammad Ali's fractured jaw said Sunday that "I personally don't understand how he could have gone 11 rounds with that much pain."

Dr. Gary Manchester, who performed a 1 ½-hour operation Saturday night to wire Ali's broken left jaw together, quoted the former heavyweight champion as saying before the surgery:

"I couldn't fight. I couldn't move my head because of the pain. He (Ken Norton) won the fight. I'm just sorry I couldn't fight."

Manchester said he hoped to keep Ali, 31, at Clairemont General Hospital here for "four or five days."

Norton, Ali's conqueror Saturday, visited the former heavyweight champion Sunday afternoon.

Manchester said the fracture was not a "clean break" as reported earlier. The fracture occurred in the first round of the 12-round fight.

"It was a very bad break," Manchester declared. "The bone which was broken had three or four jagged edges. The edges kept poking into his cheek and into his mouth.

"He had so much pain during the fight that he's totally exhausted right now."

"I'm going to try to keep him as long as possible but how long you can keep someone like Ali is anyone's guess. I'd like to keep him four or five days but I'll let him decide."

Manchester said it would be three to six months before Ali can fight again.

Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, Ali's personal physician, said the legendary fighter will have to eat with a straw and his food must be mixed in a blender while his jaw is wired together for six weeks.

Ali's jaw will be wired together for at least six weeks with two wire buttons above and two below his inside lips. They will be held tightly together with rubber bands.

However, the famous Louisville Lip was not silenced. He can talk through clinched teeth.

Ali's wife, Belinda, who became hysterical after her husband's split decision loss to Norton, was at Mercy Hospital at San Diego Sunday but a hospital spokesman refused to comment on her condition or when she would be released.

Nebraska Rodeo Slated

Students from colleges and universities in an eight-state area will enter the University of Nebraska Rodeo Association-sponsored intercollegiate rodeo April 13-14.

Contestants will represent schools in Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Missouri, or the Great Plains Region of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA).

This year's rodeo will be dedicated to two past NU Rodeo Club members and rodeo competitors: Jerry Coslor and Dan Kingman Jr. Coslor from Sargent was killed in an accident at home, and Kingman of Lincoln died in Vietnam.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. April 13 and 14, and 2 p.m. on April 14, at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum. The 1973 Rodeo Queen will be crowned during the first performance by reigning queen Kathy Maddux of Imperial.

Cowboys in this year's contest will compete in the traditional bareback and saddlebronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling and bull riding. Women's events include barrel racing, breakaway roping and goat tying.

The 10 contestants having the best scores or times for the first two performances will compete in the finals during the evening performance April 14. Points awarded each contestant will count toward the season's national and regional NIRA standing.

Flood Seeks 'Awareness'

NEW YORK (AP) — Curt Flood, the former National League star who unsucessfully challenged baseball's reserve clause before the Supreme Court, says his efforts made people aware of "what the ball player is up against.

"The problem with the reserve clause," Flood said from the sunny Mediterranean island of Majorca off the Spanish coast, where he now works as a bartender, "is that it ties a man to one owner for the rest of his life. There is now other profession in the history of mankind except slavery in which one man was tied to another for life."

Flood was interviewed the ABC-TV Howard Cosell's Sports Magazine Show Sunday.

He said his battle against the clause which binds a player to a club until he is traded, released or retires, has made "the man who buys the ticket" aware of the clause.

"In slavery, men were shipped from one plantation to another and in baseball players are shipped from one franchise to another."

Flood was a standout center fielder for the St. Louis Cardinals where he was three times named an All-Star outfielder and had a lifetime National League batting average of .293. He was traded to Philadelphia in 1969, refused to report and then filed a court attack against the reserve clause.

The suit reached the U.S. Supreme Court in 1972 but the nation's highest tribunal extended baseball's exemption from the antitrust laws, allowing the game to retain the reserve clause.

Flood sat out the 1970 season and then played briefly for the Washington Senators.

Flood criticized the recent agreement negotiated between the owners and the Major League Players Association which calls for no collective bargaining on the reserve clause for three years.

Curt Flood Discusses Problems

"It's going to take a long time to get it together," he said. "It's been three years since I started to fight it and now three more years will go by and it'll be at least another three years before they do anything about it. I've given a lot of time and money to do this.

"If I had 600 players behind me there would be no reserve clause." He moved to Majorca because "of the seclusion. I'm able to do my own thing."

Pacers Capture Win, 106-93

Indianapolis (AP) — Freddie Lewis scored 30 points to lead Indiana to a 106-93 American Basketball Association victory over Denver Sunday that gave the Pacers a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Western Division first-round playoff series.

The Rockets led almost the entire first half, holding its biggest lead at 33-23 after scoring the first basket of the second period.

With Lewis scoring 18 points in the first half and nine more in the third period, Indiana hung in the game and came back within one at 74-73 late in the third period.

The fourth period was almost all Indiana as Billy Keller hit a three-point goal to tie the game at 78-78 with 11:10 remaining and Roger Brown put Indiana ahead with a free throw a few seconds later.

OU Sweeps Twin Bill From Tigers

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Sophomore Terry Jolly drove in all four runs as Oklahoma came from behind in the second game to sweep a Big Eight baseball doubleheader from Missouri, 4-3, 3-0, here Sunday afternoon.

In the first game, sophomore hurler Stan Meeks tossed a four-hit shutout as the Sooners won, 3-0.

Missouri jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second game, and held a 3-1 margin when Jolly smashed a three-run homer for the Sooners in the fourth. Sophomore pitcher Bob Shirley kept the Tigers at bay to preserve the victory for sophomore Dean Byrom.

Oklahoma is 3-0 in the Big Eight after launching defense of its title with a three-game series with the Tigers, one of the preseason choices to challenge the Sooners.

Horse Shows Planned

A three-day series of horse shows has been planned by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Block and Bridle Club for April 12, 13 and 15.

The club will again sponsor its annual Quarter Horse Show on Thursday and Friday, and its Appaloosa Horse Show on the following Sunday. Both events are held in conjunction with the NU Rodeo Club-sponsored intercollegiate rodeo.

Both horse shows will be at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum. The Quarter Horse Show is in its 18th year, the Appaloosa Show its fourth year. The Quarter Horse Show, one of the largest approved shows in Nebraska, consists of 28 classes of competition, with 32 classes in the Appaloosa Show.

Registration for the Quarter Horse Show will begin at 8 p.m. April 11. Entries are open until the start of the previous event for the Appaloosa show.

Halter classes for registered quarter horses only will include stallions and geldings on April 12 at 10 a.m., and mares on April 13 at 8:30 a.m. Halter classes in the Appaloosa Show begin at 8 a.m. on April 15, with stallions, geldings and mares judged in that order. Immediately following the Appaloosa halter classes, which conclude with youth showmanship competition, the 19 performance classes begin.

Performance classes for the Quarter Horse Show will be April 12 at 2 p.m. (or earlier) for hunt seat English pleasure, junior and senior western pleasure, and junior and senior cattle cutting.

A championship open cattle cutting contest and novice and amateur cutting contests are set for Thursday night. A $200 added purse is offered for the winner of the championship open cutting contest, and prizes of $250 will go to the winners of the amateur and novice contests.

Texas Captures Golf Triumph

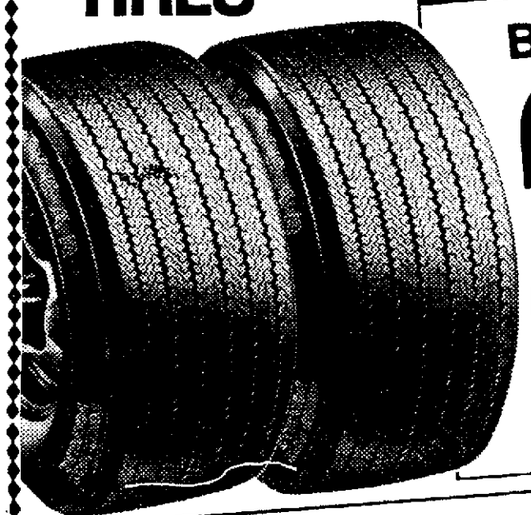

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Defending NCAA titlist Ben Crenshaw shot a two-under par 70 Sunday to win the individual title of the seventh Morris Williams Intercollegiate golf tournament by three strokes and then immediately took off for Augusta, Ga. and the Masters.

Crenshaw, in defending his title, also led Texas to a repeat win. The Longhorns fired an 866 over 54 holes, four shots better than Houston's 870.

Oklahoma State was third with 878, Texas A&M fourth with 885 and Wichita State fifth at 888. Oklahoma (906), was seventh.

Ali's Pain 'Overwhelming'

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The doctor who performed the surgery on Muhammad Ali's fractured jaw said Sunday that "I personally don't understand how he could have gone 11 rounds with that much pain."

Dr. Gary Manchester, who performed a 1 ½-hour operation Saturday night to wire Ali's broken left jaw together, quoted the former heavyweight champion as saying before the surgery:

"I couldn't fight. I couldn't move my head because of the pain. He (Ken Norton) won the fight. I'm just sorry I couldn't fight."

Manchester said he hoped to keep Ali, 31, at Clairemont General Hospital here for "four or five days."

Norton, Ali's conqueror Saturday, visited the former heavyweight champion Sunday afternoon.

Manchester said the fracture was not a "clean break" as reported earlier. The fracture occurred in the first round of the 12-round fight.

"It was a very bad break," Manchester declared. "The bone which was broken had three or four jagged edges. The edges kept poking into his cheek and into his mouth.

"He had so much pain during the fight that he's totally exhausted right now."

"I'm going to try to keep him as long as possible but how long you can keep someone like Ali is anyone's guess. I'd like to keep him four or five days but I'll let him decide."

Manchester said it would be three to six months before Ali can fight again.

Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, Ali's personal physician, said the legendary fighter will have to eat with a straw and his food must be mixed in a blender while his jaw is wired together for six weeks.

Ali's jaw will be wired together for at least six weeks with two wire buttons above and two below his inside lips. They will be held tightly together with rubber bands.

However, the famous Louisville Lip was not silenced. He can talk through clinched teeth.

Ali's wife, Belinda, who became hysterical after her husband's split decision loss to Norton, was at Mercy Hospital at San Diego Sunday but a hospital spokesman refused to comment on her condition or when she would be released.

Nebraska Rodeo Slated

Students from colleges and universities in an eight-state area will enter the University of Nebraska Rodeo Association-sponsored intercollegiate rodeo April 13-14.

Contestants will represent schools in Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Missouri, or the Great Plains Region of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA).

This year's rodeo will be dedicated to two past NU Rodeo Club members and rodeo competitors: Jerry Coslor and Dan Kingman Jr. Coslor from Sargent was killed in an accident at home, and Kingman of Lincoln died in Vietnam.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. April 13 and 14, and 2 p.m. on April 14, at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum. The 1973 Rodeo Queen will be crowned during the first performance by reigning queen Kathy Maddux of Imperial.

Cowboys in this year's contest will compete in the traditional bareback and saddlebronc riding, calf roping, steer wrestling and bull riding. Women's events include barrel racing, breakaway roping and goat tying.

The 10 contestants having the best scores or times for the first two performances will compete in the finals during the evening performance April 14. Points awarded each contestant will count toward the season's national and regional NIRA standing.

Flood Seeks 'Awareness'

NEW YORK (AP) — Curt Flood, the former National League star who unsucessfully challenged baseball's reserve clause before the Supreme Court, says his efforts made people aware of "what the ball player is up against.

"The problem with the reserve clause," Flood said from the sunny Mediterranean island of Majorca off the Spanish coast, where he now works as a bartender, "is that it ties a man to one owner for the rest of his life. There is now other profession in the history of mankind except slavery in which one man was tied to another for life."

Flood was interviewed the ABC-TV Howard Cosell's Sports Magazine Show Sunday.

He said his battle against the clause which binds a player to a club until he is traded, released or retires, has made "the man who buys the ticket" aware of the clause.

"In slavery, men were shipped from one plantation to another and in baseball players are shipped from one franchise to another."

Flood was a standout center fielder for the St. Louis Cardinals where he was three times named an All-Star outfielder and had a lifetime National League batting average of .293. He was traded to Philadelphia in 1969, refused to report and then filed a court attack against the reserve clause.

The suit reached the U.S. Supreme Court in 1972 but the nation's highest tribunal extended baseball's exemption from the antitrust laws, allowing the game to retain the reserve clause.

Flood sat out the 1970 season and then played briefly for the Washington Senators.

Flood criticized the recent

agreement negotiated between the owners and the Major League Players Association which calls for no collective bargaining on the reserve clause for three years.

"It's going to take a long time to get it together," he said. "It's been three years since I started to fight it and now three more years will go by and it'll be at least another three years before they do anything about it. I've given a lot of time and money to do this.

"If I had 600 players behind me there would be no reserve clause." He moved to Majorca because "of the seclusion. I'm able to do my own thing."

Pacers Capture Win, 106-93

Indianapolis (AP) — Freddie Lewis scored 30 points to lead Indiana to a 106-93 American Basketball Association victory over Denver Sunday that gave the Pacers a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Western Division first-round playoff series.

The Rockets led almost the entire first half, holding its biggest lead at 33-23 after scoring the first basket of the second period.

With Lewis scoring 18 points in the first half and nine more in the third period, Indiana hung in the game and came back within one at 74-73 late in the third period.

The fourth period was almost all Indiana as Billy Keller hit a three-point goal to tie the game at 78-78 with 11:10 remaining and Roger Brown put Indiana ahead with a free throw a few seconds later.

OU Sweeps Twin Bill From Tigers

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Sophomore Terry Jolly drove in all four runs as Oklahoma came from behind in the second game to sweep a Big Eight baseball doubleheader from Missouri, 4-3, 3-0, here Sunday afternoon.

In the first game, sophomore hurler Stan Meeks tossed a four-hit shutout as the Sooners won, 3-0.

Missouri jumped to a 2-0 lead in the second game, and held a 3-1 margin when Jolly smashed a three-run homer for the Sooners in the fourth. Sophomore pitcher Bob Shirley kept the Tigers at bay to preserve the victory for sophomore Dean Byrom.

Oklahoma is 3-0 in the Big Eight after launching defense of its title with a three-game series with the Tigers, one of the preseason choices to challenge the Sooners.

Horse Shows Planned

A three-day series of horse shows has been planned by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Block and Bridle Club for April 12, 13 and 15.

The club will again sponsor its annual Quarter Horse Show on Thursday and Friday, and its Appaloosa Horse Show on the following Sunday. Both events are held in conjunction with the NU Rodeo Club-sponsored intercollegiate rodeo.

Both horse shows will be at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum. The Quarter Horse Show is in its 18th year, the Appaloosa Show its fourth year. The Quarter Horse Show, one of the largest approved shows in Nebraska, consists of 28 classes of competition, with 32 classes in the Appaloosa Show.

Registration for the Quarter Horse Show will begin at 8 p.m. April 11. Entries are open until the start of the previous event for the Appaloosa show.

Halter classes for registered quarter horses only will include stallions and geldings on April 12 at 10 a.m., and mares on April 13 at 8:30 a.m. Halter classes in the Appaloosa Show begin at 8 a.m. on April 15, with stallions, geldings and mares judged in that order. Immediately following the Appaloosa halter classes, which conclude with youth showmanship competition, the 19 performance classes begin.

Performance classes for the Quarter Horse Show will be April 12 at 2 p.m. (or earlier) for hunt seat English pleasure, junior and senior western pleasure, and junior and senior cattle cutting.

A championship open cattle cutting contest and novice and amateur cutting contests are set for Thursday night. A $200 added purse is offered for the winner of the championship open cutting contest, and prizes of $250 will go to the winners of the amateur and novice contests.

Texas Captures Golf Triumph

Austin, Tex. (UPI) — Defending NCAA titlist Ben Crenshaw shot a two-under par 70 Sunday to win the individual title of the seventh Morris Williams Intercollegiate golf tournament by three strokes and then immediately took off for Augusta, Ga. and the Masters.

Crenshaw, in defending his title, also led Texas to a repeat win. The Longhorns fired an 866 over 54 holes, four shots better than Houston's 870.

Oklahoma State was third with 878, Texas A&M fourth with 885 and Wichita State fifth at 888. Oklahoma (906), was seventh.

Actress Is Battling Rising Prices

Woodland Hills, Calif. (AP) — June Foray Donavan is a woman who speaks in many voices, but right now she is speaking as a housewife angered by rising prices.

Mrs. Donavan is the organizer of Fight Inflation Together, one of the key organizations behind the meat boycott that spread across the country like a cattle stampede. She also is one of the leading voices in Hollywood for animated cartoons, records and commercials.

"Had I know that FIT was going to balloon like this I wouldn't have gone into it," she sighed. "It's exhausting."

Her telephone rings all day long — and sometimes in these predawn hours when the sun is already up on the East Coast. A borrowed post office bon in Simi Valley bulges every day with 1,500 letters sent to her and Lillian Miller, FIT's executive secretary.

The group expects millions of housewives to boycott meat on Tuesday and Thursday during the week of April 1-7.

Since the boycott was organized in Mrs. Donavan's family room four weeks ago it has had enormous effect across the country. She said meat sales are off 20 per cent and the price of beef has dropped 5 to 10 cents a pound and the price of pork has dropped 20 cents a pound.

"It touched exposed nerves," she said. "The timing was right. People are outraged at the confiscatory prices."

Mrs. Donavan is an attractive, petite housewife with reddish brown hair. She lives in a spacious home in the Woodland Hills section of Los Angeles with her husband, novelist Hobart Donavan, and two great Danes as big as mountain lions, Bridget and Fionna.

HEAVY MAIL . . . keeps June busy. AP

Professionally, she is June Foray, formerly of "The Red Skelton Show" and "Green Acres," and a leading voice for cartoons, records and commercials. She is the voice of "Pogo," Rockey the Squirrel and Natasha on "Bullwinkle," Little Nell on "Dudley Dooright," plays many Disney characters and is on all the greats in the animation field.

"I'd much rather do voices. I can do two-three sessions a day. I was on 'Green Acres,' but it takes too long. I guess I'm just getting lazy."

Mrs. Donavan will testify before the Joint Economics Committee of Congress on Wednesday, April 4. "They called me on the telephone and said they would send a letter of instruction." She laughed. "A letter of instruction. I feel like a CIA agent."

In the meantime, she is preparing a lecture she will deliver to a class in animation at Sherida College, Oakville, Ontario, Canada, on April 10. That is, between telephone calls, answering letters, handing out leaflets at supermarkets and talking to the press.

"We don't picket supermarkets," she said. "We call it leafleting. On Tuesdays or Thursdays we hand out leaflets. And we prepare meatless recipes.

"I think FIT has made the government aware of the anger of the housewife. We are reflecting that anger in the only way we know how — and that's at the retail level."

One thing Mrs. Donavan is adamant about is that the movement remain low-keyed.

"We disavow women with picket signs and inflammatory literature," she said. "We've gotten where we have by being soft-spoken and nonpolitical and militant. And look what we've accomplished so far."

Wide Range Of Summer Courses Set

Summer courses ranging from swimming for pre-schoolers to foreign language tours for high school-age younsters will be offered during June and July by the Lincoln Public Schools.

Registration for most courses begins Monday and ends May 11. Public school students are urged to register at the school they attend; other youngsters may register at the school they expect to attend.

At both the elementary and secondary level, students may choose to attend six-week courses or three-week mini-courses beginning either June 6 or June 8.

For most courses, tuition cost will be $10 per hour, but two or more hours may be taken at a total cost of $20.

Most secondary classes are scheduled at East High School, while elementary classes will be offered at 14 schools in the city.

Enrichment Classes

A special program of enrichment classes, for children from preschool age through grade seven, has been scheduled at Clare McPhee School under the auspices of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln elementary education department.

That program will be built around the theme, "man and his environment."

Elementary course offerings range from basic programs in math and reading to art and creative dramatics.

Several special education courses are also being offered through the office of Don Sherrill, director of special education programs for the public schools.

Physical education and music classes will also be available to the young student.

At the junior and senior high level, the course offerings range from art to business education.

Broadway Musical

One music course will culminate in production of a Broadway musical, combining talents of art, music and drama students.

Foreign language tours to Mexico and french-speaking areas of Canada are also planned; registration for those must be completed by April 15.

Computer programming, creative selling and rock music are among the other courses offered in the senior high school.

For secondary students, three bus routes have been established to transport the youngsters from secondary schools near their homes to East High.

Divorce Rate Lower In Italy During 1972

ROME (AP) — Demands for divorce fell sharply in Italy last year, the National Statistics Bureau announced.

It said 20,410 divorce requests were filed during 1972, compared to 55,615 the year before. But applications for legal separation increased, from 21,514 in 1971 to 22,692 last year.

The bureau said Saturday the divorce rate was particularly high in 1971 because it was the first year of the divorce law in Roman Catholic Italy. The law is under attack by Roman Catholic organizations which plan to bring the issue to voters in a referendum.

Fire Damages Bloebaum Home

A fire Sunday morning at the Steve Bloebaum residence at 3810 Adams resulted in "considerable" damage to a bedroom and its contents, according to district fire chief Mel Keller.

Keller said the fire started when the Bloebaum children were playing with a cigarette lighter and caught the curtains on fire.

The curtains, the childrens' toys, the carpet and the window casing were damaged in the blaze.

Bombs, Mines 'Could' Be Used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bombing of North Vietnam and mining the Haiphong harbor again are "among the kinds of things that could be done" if North Vietnam does not live up to the cease-fire agreement, Secretary of Defense Elliot L. Richardson said Sunday.

Richardson's comments came in response to questions on NBC's "Meet the Press."

The secretary had first said "I wouldn't want to speculate" on what action President Nixon might order in an effort to cut off the arms and supplies still reportedly being sent to North Vietnamese soldiers in South Vietnam.

But he then added that the bombing and mining mentioned by a newsman are possible actions.

To a followup question, Richardson said "I was merely noting the point that if you are identifying possible courses of action, you have to include all the things that have been done" in the past by the United States against the North.

At still another point, Richardson said the North Vietnamese "have some reason to know" Nixon "has been willing to do what is necessary" to achieve a cease-fire.

The secretary's remarks came amid continued reports of military flareups in the South and shipments of arms into the South from North Vietnam.

"There have been significant additions into the pipeline since the cease-fire agreement," Richardson said.

Pressed for a justification for U.S. bombing in Cambodia, Richardson said the United States is supporting the Cambodian government in "its efforts to bring about a cease-fore" there.

The Unnted States, he said, is "trying to encourage the observance of" the cease-fire agreement "by engaging in air actions at the request of" the Cambodian government, which he described as the principal victim of current Communist aggression in Indochina.

Red Siege Of Outpost Continues

Saigon (AP) — The siege of a South Vietnamese ranger camp began its sixth week Monday, several small clashes were reported in the Saigon region, and seven civilians were killed and 31 wounded in a series of attacks, government headquarters reported.

A government communique said Communist gunners fired about 600 rounds of artillery into the besieged Tong Le Chan ranger base 50 miles north of Saigon over the weekend. Two rangers were killed and 16 wounded, the Saigon command said.

The communique said Communist sappers also tried to break through the barbed-wire perimeter of the base but were driven back without any government casualties.

According to the Saigon command, the camp has been under siege since Feb. 26 and its defenders have suffered more than 100 casualties.

Government communiques have made no mention of Communist losses, although South Vietnamese bombers have been reported pounding their positions.

Up to 500 government soldiers are based at Ton Le Chan, which the government says sits astride infiltration and supply routes. The four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervison has been powerless to stop the fighting.

Three small clashes were reported 15 to 30 miles south of Saigon, with a half dozen Communists killed and one government soldier killed and seven wounded, the Saigon command said.

The heaviest civilian toll was reported in Chau Doc Province in the Mekong Delta, where six persons were killed and 22 wounded in rocket and mortar attacks on a district town and a village, the Saigon command said.

The command claimed 123 more violations of the cease-fire during the 24-hour period ending at 6 a.m. Sunday and claimed this raised the total to 9,319 since the truce went into effect Jan. 28. It gave these over-all casualties since that date:

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong — 15,447 killed.

South Vietnamese military — 3,285 killed, 15,984 wounded, 899 missing.

Civilian — 480 killed, 1,368 wounded.

Actress Is Battling Rising Prices

Woodland Hills, Calif. (AP) — June Foray Donavan is a woman who speaks in many voices, but right now she is speaking as a housewife angered by rising prices.

Mrs. Donavan is the organizer of Fight Inflation Together, one of the key organizations behind the meat boycott that spread across the country like a cattle stampede. She also is one of the leading voices in Hollywood for animated cartoons, records and commercials.

"Had I know that FIT was going to balloon like this I wouldn't have gone into it," she sighed. "It's exhausting."

Her telephone rings all day long — and sometimes in these predawn hours when the sun is already up on the East Coast. A borrowed post office bon in Simi Valley bulges every day with 1,500 letters sent to her and Lillian Miller, FIT's executive secretary.

The group expects millions of housewives to boycott meat on Tuesday and Thursday during the week of April 1-7.

Since the boycott was organized in Mrs. Donavan's family room four weeks ago it has had enormous effect across the country. She said meat sales are off 20 per cent and the price of beef has dropped 5 to 10 cents a pound and the price of pork has dropped 20 cents a pound.

"It touched exposed nerves," she said. "The timing was right. People are outraged at the confiscatory prices."

Mrs. Donavan is an attractive, petite housewife with reddish brown hair. She lives in a spacious home in the Woodland Hills section of Los Angeles with her husband, novelist Hobart Donavan, and two great Danes as big as mountain lions, Bridget and Fionna.

AP

HEAVY MAIL . . . keeps June busy.

Professionally, she is June Foray, formerly of "The Red Skelton Show" and "Green Acres," and a leading voice for cartoons, records and commercials. She is the voice of "Pogo," Rockey the Squirrel and Natasha on "Bullwinkle," Little Nell on "Dudley Dooright," plays many Disney characters and is on all the Stan Freberg comedy records. On the ABC special, "Cricket on Times Square," April 24, she is the voice of the newspaper vendor.

On the day of the interview she had another appointment in Hollywood to record an animated cereal commercial.

"I started as a radio actress when I was 12," she said, "doing character parts even then because you had to double. When radio disintegrated I signed with a record company and that led me to Disney. I was on my way. I've worked for all the greats in the animation field.

"I'd much rather do voices. I can do two-three sessions a day. I was on 'Green Acres,' but it takes too long. I guess I'm just getting lazy."

Mrs. Donavan will testify before the Joint Economics Committee of Congress on Wednesday, April 4. "They called me on the telephone and said they would send a letter of instruction." She laughed, "A letter of instruction. I feel like a CIA agent."

In the meantime, she is preparing a lecture she will deliver to a class in animation at Sherida College, Oakville, Ontario, Canada, on April 10. That is, between telephone calls, answering letters, handing out leaflets at supermarkets and talking to the press.

"We don't picket supermarkets," she said. "We call it leafleting. On Tuesdays or Thursdays we hand out leaflets. And we prepare meatless recipes.

"I think FIT has made the government aware of the anger of the housewife. We are reflecting that anger in the only way we know how — and that's at the retail level."

One thing Mrs. Donavan is adamant about is that the movement remain low-keyed.

"We disavow women with picket signs and inflammatory literature," she said. "We've gotten where we have by being soft-spoken and nonpolitical and militant. And look what we've accomplished so far."

Wide Range Of Summer Courses Set

Summer courses ranging from swimming for pre-schoolers to foreign language tours for high school-age younsters will be offered during June and July by the Lincoln Public Schools.

Registration for most courses begins Monday and ends May 11. Public school students are urged to register at the school they attend; other youngsters may register at the school they expect to attend.

At both the elementary and secondary level, students may choose to attend six-week courses or three-week mini-courses beginning either June 6 or June 8.

For most courses, tuition cost will be $10 per hour, but two or more hours may be taken at a total cost of $20

Most secondary classes are scheduled at East High School, while elementary classes will be offered at 14 schools in the city.

Enrichment Classes

A special program of enrichment classes, for children from pre-school age through grade seven, has been scheduled at Clare McPhee School under the auspices of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln elementary education department.

That program will be built around the theme, "man and his environment."

Elementary course offerings range from basic programs in math and reading to art and creative dramatics.

Several special education courses are also being offered through the office of Don Sherrill, director of special education programs for the public schools.

Physical education and music classes will also be available to the young student.

At the junior and senior high level, the course offerings range from art to business education.

Broadway Musical

One music course will culminate in production of a Broadway musical, combining talents of art, music and drama students.

Foreign language tours to Mexico and french-speaking areas of Canada are also planned; registration for those must be completed by April 15.

Computer programming, creative selling and rock music are among the other courses offered in the senior high school.

For secondary students, three bus routes have been established to transport the youngsters from secondary schools near their homes to East High.

Students will be charged for the service.

Weicker Claims Haldeman 'Knew'

...White House Aide Sought For Senate Probe Appearance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Sen. Lowell P. Weicker said Sunday he believes White House Chief of Staff H. R. Haldeman "knew what was going on" with the men and policies involved in the Watergate burglary.

He said it is "absolutely necessary" that Haldeman appear before the Senate Watergate investigating committee, of which Weicker is a member.

The Connecticut Republican also said one of the Watergate spies told him he had staked out offices of at least six senators, including Republicans Charles Percy and Jacob Javits.

And he said the same man, former FBI agent Alfred C. Baldwin, said the Watergate arrests last June 17 foiled plan by the bugging crew to break into the campaign headquarters of Sen George McGovern and to tap the Miami convention telephones of Democratic Party Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and other top party officials.

Baldwin was the man who listened to tapped telephone conversations of Democratic officials in their headquarters at the Watergate building, and who later testified against others in the case.

DeVan L. Shumway, public affairs director for the Committee for the Re-election of the President, called Weicker's statements irresponsible and "inflammatory."

"The answer is absolutely, categorically, undeniably no," Shumway said when asked if there was any truth to Weicker's assertion that Baldwin was ordered by the re-election committee to stake out the offices of members of Congress.

Weicker said Baldwin acted on orders of James W. McCord, convicted of burglary and wiretapping in the case. He said Baldwin watched comings and goings from the offices of Sens. Percy, R-Ill., Javits, R-N.Y., Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, William Proxmire, D-wis., Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; and Reps. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y. and Paul McCloskey, R-Calif.

Javits and Percy both said they were surprised to hear Nixon re-election agents had staked out their offices. Percy said his staff had suspected that someone had tapped his office telephone, but couldn't prove it.

Percy, a possible Republican presidential contender for 1976, said if Baldwin actually watched his office he would think it "an outrageous action."

Weicker spoke on the CBS television news program, "Face the Nation."

Weicker said he is as concerned with an "apparent coverup" of the facts behind the GOP spying as he is of the spying itself.

He said Haldeman was the key figure on both the White House staff and on the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

"I don't think its fair to point the finger at him and say, 'this is the man that's responsible,' Weicker said.

"All I'm saying is that when it came to personnel, he knew what was going on," Weicker said. "And there was nothing in the way of policies that was going on that he didn't know either."

"I think it's absolutely necessary that Mr. Haldeman testify before the committee," Weicker said.

The White House has said it may allow some presidential assistants to appear informally and in private before the Senate unit.

A source earlier had reported that Watergate conspirator McCord, in secret testimony before the committee, said Haldeman "had to be aware" of Watergate plans.

Weicker said McCord's secret testimony was "believable," but added, "I certainly wouldn't want to base my entire case on James McCord." He said McCord's testimony hasn't been corroborated.

Weicker had said earlier that McCord told the committee Watergate plans had been approved by John N. Mitchell, former U.S. attorney general and Nixon campaign manager But Sunday Weicker said he had "no specific knowledge" that Mitchell was involved further than knowing some of the men who were arrested.

Weicker also said he is "inclined to disbelieve" that White House Counsel John W. Dean III had any involvement or prior knowledge of the affair. McCord also had named Dean, according to Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

Weicker said he is disturbed that the nomination of his friend L. Patrick Gray III, to head the FBI, "seems to be going down the chute." The Senate judiciary committee is reportedly divided on Gray's nomination mainly because of Nixon's reluctance to allow White House aides to testify about Watergate.

AP

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker

Weicker introduced Gray when he first testified before the Judiciary Committee, and said, "I'm as proud of him today as I was then."

Weicker said GOP campaign aides were "almost competitive as to who could do the dirtiest deed ... the most destructive tactic."

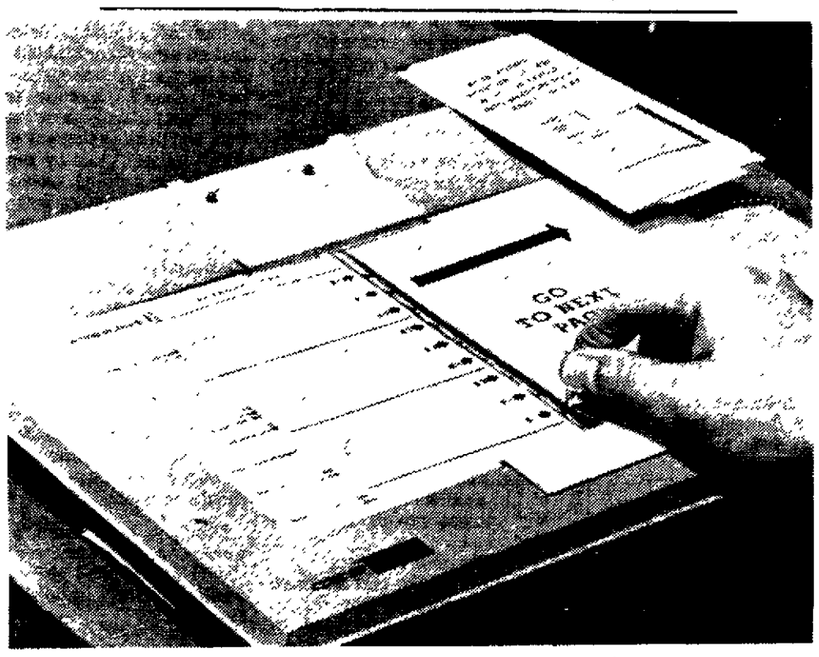

"The resources on the other end of the line are limitless," Weicker said. "And believeve me they are using not only the entire power of the executive branch, but every theory they can drag up" to cover up the affair.

Shumway said, "There was at the committee not any attitude of who could 'do the dirtiest deed.'"

He said Baldwin was dismissed from his party job after a few days when he proved incompetent as a bodyguard for Mrs. Martha Mitchell, wife of the attorney general who was then Nixon campaign director.

"It is regrettable," Shumway said, "that a member of the Select Committee should at this early stage of the proceedings go on nationwide television to purposefully make sensational allegations."

He said he hoped Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., the committee chairman, would use his authority "to do what he planned to do and conduct the hearing in a judicial and orderly atmosphere."

However, Tuesday's primary should provide a better experiment, he said, since the ballot is shorter

Voters will choose candidates for the City Council, Board of Education and Airport Authority, plus vote on raising council members' salaries to $4,000 yearly

To use the machines voters should

—After receiving a numbered IBM card from a precinct worker, take the card into the booth

—Insert the card into the machine, which places the card under a booklet containing ballot choices

—Record votes by placing a metal punch into the hole of your choice, which pokes out a portion of the card

Voters can confirm that their votes were correctly recorded by comparing the number on the booklet with the number on the IBM card.

—Officials then take the cards to the County-City Building where the city's computers will count the votes and provide printout totals.

Davidson emphasized that use of the machines would result in increased accuracy in counting ballots and speed up the counting process — resulting in earlier election returns.

AIM Lists 10 Negotiable Items

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Leaders of the American Indian Movement forces occupying Wounded Knee presented government officials a list of 10 negotiable items Sunday aimed at bringing about a peaceful settlement to the 34-day confrontation.

The list was given to Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Kent Frizzell during a three-hour meeting in a tepee on the outskirts of the village

Neither Frizzell nor AIM attorney Ramon Roubideaux would discuss the contents of the list. But Roubideaux said, "I think there is substantial agreement on most of the points".

Roubideaux told a news conference, "I think the confrontation is very close to being settled." He declined to elaborate.

Frizzell was less optimistic "When I have an agreement that all can reach consensus on, that's when I'm going to get optimistic, not before," he said.

Frizzell said no agreement was reached on the points discussed Sunday. He said negotiators would meet again Monday afternoon to continue the talks

Frizzell announced that 20 to 25 persons had been detected attempting to sneak into Wounded Knee during the night Saturday. He said they scattered when spotted, but two or three were arrested. One knapsack filled with ammunition was recovered, he said.

The Sunday meeting had been delayed at the request of AIM officials, as had the session the day before. The negotiations Sunday marked the first time since the Feb. 27 takeover that the two sides had met for two consecutive days.

Spokesmen for both sides expressed optimism that progress had been made Saturday. However, the government refused requests by the AIM officials to relax federal roadblocks so food could be brought into Wounded Knee

One AIM attorney, Ramon Roubideaux of Rapid City, said it was "the first good, in-depth meeting on the issues since the occupation began." He said the main issue in Sunday's talks would be an 1868 U.S.-Indian treaty that gave all of the Dakota Territory land west of the Missouri River to the Indians

Frizzell said the only concrete agreement resulting from Saturday's session was to continue the cease-fire in effect since Tuesday But he said he was "encouraged by the atmosphere" of the talks.

On the food issue, Frizzell said "To my knowledge, the U.S. government has never given food to the enemy to sustain them." Exceptions to the food blockade are milk and baby food for children in the village

Middle West Heart Hit By Harsh, Early Winter

By R. F. HARVISON
Associated Press Writer

The winter of 1973 fell early and harshly across the heart of the Middle West, leaving in its wake sizeable losses in livestock and crops

A Cape Girardeau, Mo., farmer's grandmother saw an eagle in December — a traditional omen of a severe winter and a bit of folklorecome true as disclosed by an Associated Press survey of Missouri Kansas, Oklahoma and Nebraska

In addition to losses of crops and cattle, the four states reported more-than-usual seasonal damage to streets and highways, and electric utility equipment much of it resulting from December and January ice storms

Farmers in all four states sustained losses from a wet fall which found sorghum and corn crops still in the fields. Muddy conditions this spring have hampered pre-planting preparations for next year's crops.

In Nebraska, farmers reported an estimated 7 per cent of the grain sorghum acreage, or some 100,000 acres, never was harvested

The Division of Agricultural Statistics said what is left in the fields is deteriorating more each day with heads beginning to mold

All but 3 per cent of the Cornhusker state corn crop has been harvested

A similar story came from Oklahoma, where harvest of soybeans and cotton was seriously delayed by wet weather Water standing in fields also delayed plowing and fertilizing -- and now there is a problem with weeds

Larry Robinson, Oklahoma Department of Agriculture information officer, reported that at the end of February, 25 per cent of the soybean crop remained in the fields Harvest usually is completed by the end of November

Winter moisture was good for wheat, but many farmers were allowing cattle to graze on the wheat so they could get a good return in high beef prices instead of on the wheat market

The Kansas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service reported sorghum appeared the only crop with measurable loss, although there was no actual estimate of crop damage

Ray Hancock, reporting service spokesman, said there was no damage at all to the wheat crop but that corn and soybean estimates were revised downward at the end of January to take into account the bad fall weather

Hancock noted the wheat crop was planted before the severe weather set in and that wheat generally is not affected by weather after it is planted

Spring oats and barley ware a different story As of last week, Hancock said only 7 per cent of the Kansas spring oat crop was planted, compared with an average 33 per cent by this date Barley he said was only 9 per cent seeded, compared with an average of 17 per cent

Farmers are behind in preparing their spring land for seeding Hancock said "but with modern equipment, it doesn't take long for them to prepare the soil once it dries out"

In Missouri, Glen Peterson, marketing director of the 47,000-member state farm bureau, said Missouri farmers also were unable to properly fertilize fields last fall Fuel shortages, he said, have affected supplies of fertilizer this spring and muddy fields have hampered preplanting preparations

A severe December ice storm in southwest Missouri was especially hard on dairy farmers many of whom were without electricity for 10 days

Cattle perhaps were the principal victims of the severe winter Plate appeared to be no over all figures on cattle losses for the four state but they were large A sharp increase in the price of feed went along with the losses

Ellis Freeney of the Oklahoma Cattlemen's Association said the feed price increase was as much as 25 to 50 per cent adding "no one knows for sure about a death count on cattle

"We do know we lost some of the lightweight feed cattle shipped in from the south They normally have respiratory problems

"I have heard some of our cattle producers say they expect a 5 to 10 per cent drop in calf production this year because of the weather," Freeney said He added, however, Oklahoma "still will produce more beef this year than last."

In Kansas, above-normal feedlot deaths were reported in January and February. Hancock said the crop and livestock reporting service has no figures but expressed belief losses actually were not as bad as had been feared

Glen Peterson, marketing director of the Missouri Farm Bureau, said mud had reduced the weight gain of livestock, adding that if the moisture continues through the spring, even higher meat and grain prices can be expected

Highways took a severe beating in all four states

Nebraska's highways may be in their worst conditions since the advent of paving, said Walter Witt, State Roads Department.

"A number of our district engineers have told me we've never had it like this before I'm sure it's one of the worst years for a long time, and as far as I can detect, it could be the worst"

Excessive moisture last fall, early snow, poor drying conditions and a continuing cycle of freezes and thaws combined to create havoc to the roadways

Richard A Ward, director of the Oklahoma Department of Highways, reported thaby mid-February, the bill for weather damage was $5,906,347 Ward emphasized that figure was over and above the amount normally programmed for road maintenance Other highway officials said more wet weather since has caused an additional $1 million damage.

John D McNeal, Kansas highway engineer, said that state will require a good deal of maintenance patching, although no long sections of highway will need resurfacing as a result of weather damage

Early fall wet weather prevented Kansas highway crews from getting some of the road sections waterproofed—patching cracks and filling seals

"This is where the problems come from," McNeal said "We didn't get this work done, so we've got more deterioration than usual"

Overtime paid Kansas road crews from December through February to keep roads clear was three times the amount paid for the same period the previous year

Missouri highway officials say damage to roads and bridges resulting from bad weather is expected to be the worst in 10 years Large-scale road and street damage also was reported in metropolitan Kansas City and St Louis

Paul A Watkins Jr public information officer for the Missouri Highway Commission said the bill for snow and ice removal already has exceeded $3 8 million and should surpass the $5 4 million set last winter

Streets of both Kansas City and St Louis were riddled with pot holes and a lengthy early spring wet spell afforded no chance to fill the holes Extensive damage also was reported to trees on streets and in the parks of the two cities resulting primarily from ice storms

Paul Spelbrink St Louis streets director, reported that by Jan 15 the city had used as muchsalt on its streets as had been used all of last winter The freeze and-thaw pattern, affecting moisture accumulation in joints and cracks severely damaged many streets, he said The Kansas City Parks Department estimated 10,000 trees or one in nine on city land, damaged Private-land tree damage appeared comparable, all resulting from ice storms

Monetary damage to trees on private property in Kansas City was estimated at $870,000 It also will cost an estimated $500,000 to remove limbs from damaged and downed trees

Electric power interruptions and fuel shortages were another burden of the long, cold winter

In Oklahoma, some areas recorded below-freezing temperatures from Jan 4 to Jan. 12. Oklahoma Natural Gas Co., reported that by industry standards the season from Sept. 1, 1972 to March 13, 1973, was 14.6 per cent colder than normal and 10 3 per cent colder than the same period last year.

The company said that during the subfreezing period in January, service was curtailed to some industrial customers, while Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. reported similar curtailments to industries and schools for slightly more than a day during the same period.

There were widespread electrical and telephone outages in central Oklahoma during the first week of 1973, resulting from a severe ice storm.

Electric power interruptions and fuel shortages were more severe in Missouri.

A C Burrows, general manager of the Missouri Electric Cooperatives Association, said ice in southwest Missouri caused some $350,000 damage, including loss of about 500 utility poles A January ice storm also caused extensive damage from Kansas City northward.

The winter, severe as it was, was not a record break for Missouri Although the state recorded 20 inches of snow and ice from November through Februaru, the figure failed to top 1960, when there was 16 inches of snow on the ground at one period

The prolonged cold, however, resulted in severe fuel shortages that in turn affected industry in some areas of the four states, especially in northwest Missouri

Bitterly cold early-winter weather in Nebraska prompted Gov J J Exon to plea for conservation of fuel by all citizens. The first week of December was especially cold with a temperature of 32 below zero recorded Dec 6 at Agate, Neb.

The temperature moderated later in the winter, easing the fuel crisis somewhat But it prevented artifical drying of grain, which increased crop losses

Schweser's Is Hit By Fire In Norfolk

Norfolk (AP) — A four-alarm fire caused extensive damage to Schweser's Department Store in the downtown Norfolk business district Sunday afternoon.

Firemen from Norfolk, Madison, Battle Creek and Hoskins battled the flames four hours before bringing them under control.

Fire Chief Larry Reeves said the cause of the blaze had not been determined and there was no dollar estimate of damage

Firemen used gas masks to get close enough to fight the flames and it was necessary to use a Nebraska Public Power District boom truck to lift a fireman to a position above the roof, from where he could hose water on flames between a false ceiling and the roof

A part of the roof in the eastern part of the building collapsed, sending clouds of smoke into the air.

The store was divided into men's and women's sections, with the men's department located in the eastern part, which sustained the most damage

A two-story structure above the women's section to the west, which formerly housed the Norfolk Beauty College, was vacant and damage there apparently was minor.

The F W. Woolworth store just east of Schweser's appared to have escaped damage.

All off-duty and reserve Norfolk police officers were called to the scene to close off the area and prevent possible looting.

The Schweser store manager, Wayne Benton, said it was not known if the building would be rebuilt.

Headquartered in Fremont, Schweser's has other stores in Fremont, Columbus, Hastings, Grand Island, Kearney and North Platte

Thieves Net $1.4 Million In London

LONDON (AP) — Burglars broke into a West London post office under the noses of the police and stole cash, stamps and money orders officially listed as worth 600,000 pounds — about $1 4 million

The raiders struck at Twickenham post office, which is down the road from a large police station

The break-in was discovered Sunday morning and it took several hours to count the losses

The raid was the second biggest on a post office in Britain since the Great Train Robbery in 1963 when about $6 million was snatched from a royal mail train ambushed north of London

The previous second-biggest loss for a post office was in December 1969, when burglars escaped with about $1 22 million in cash, postage and social security stamps from a post office in the central London district of Mayfair

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Suggestions Are Offered To Curb Price Increases

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Merryle Rukeyser

Flexibility Needed

The clamor for a meat boycott constituted an outlet for pent up emotions growing out of resentment over runaway prices rather than a practical solution. In face of the current economic dislocations, it's not enough to become hot heads. Certainly nothing but frustration could result if the search for inflation scapegoates degenerated into internal class warefare among farmers, consumers and food merchants.

In order to minimize damage to family wellbeing, prudent persons in time of inflation don't freeze their life style, but make adjustments, such as shifting to less expensive cuts of meat, including use of the internal organs of the steer. The need for flexibility varies from household to household in accord with the availability of discretionary income. In any circumstances, the potentially corrective processes of a free competitive marketplace should not be impaired by economic freebootery.

To get down to he nitty gritty, in face of the abnormal surge of prices, the supermarket owner shouldn't stand still, and merely piously mouth tired phrases about supply and demand. So doing irritates the victims. Demand is admittedly at a new peak as a result of a combination of factors. With crop failures in Eastern Europe and China which have imported U S grains, domestic demand for food is at a new high because of peak personal incomes reflecting rising prosperity, and wider use of the food stamp program for low income groups has been evidenced.

Wasteful Practices

In light of the current price shock, it behooves those in the business of bringing food in retail stores to consumers to re-examine untenable long term wasteful practices. Chain-store operators would in public confidence by taking steps to rid the industry of expensive skullduggery and cost inflating commercial bribery, which sap retail food profit margins despite high selling prices The time is ripe for frank disclosure of hidden, built-in illegitimate merchandising costs.

As a starter, top management should reappraise the integrity of their own purchasing agents to make sure that costs are not padded through under the table deals to collect kick backs from suppliers. This delicate and unpleasant task shouldn't be sidestepped.

Secondly, paradoxically, even some of the labor bosses who shout loudest about high food prices contribute to the situation by condoning the economic waste of feather bedding. Instead of jawboning about this, the federal government and the states should promptly revise their labor-management legislation, and provide that any union which inflates costs by supporting feather bedding, should lose their privileges under law

Dishonesty Expensive

Thirdly, while in these days of consumerism, it is fashionable to assume that the customers can do no wrong, costs are dangerously expanded because of the dishonesty of a small percentage of patrons. Pilfering by kleptomaniacs and dishonest customers disgracefully pads costs, which are passed along to legitimate customers Far stronger security measures should be applied

Fourthly, management's improvement of security measures should be designed also to cut down pilfering by dishonest employes.

120 Gamblers Caught In Chinatown Raid

Los Angeles (UPI) — To spotters at the door, the two men looked like well-dressed, well-heeled patrons come to spend a night gambling in Chinatown. It was a mistake — they were vice squad cops.

What followed Saturday night was one of the biggest gambling raids staged in Chinatown in recent years, with an estimated 50 wealthy patrons ducking out back doors and windows.

The night began as a quiet installation dinner for cafe owner Harry Wong as head of the Bk Tong, but ended in an uproar about midnight when vice officers rounded up more than 120 men and woman who hadn't managed to find a door or window. Vice Squad Lt. James Jones said there were so many suspects that the auditorium at police headquarters had to be used to book them all.

Jones said the well-dressed guests, some with thousands of dollars in their pockets, filed into the Bing Kong Tong, the largest and most popular social hall in the city's dodnwotnw Chinese community.

Jones said he sent two modishly dressed officers to investigate, but recalled later that he didn't think his men could slip past the guards or the secret warning devices he felt sure were being used. When the officers turned up at the front door they were mistaken for guests and the door guard didn't bother to raise the alarm. Both men filed into the gambling room.

Inside, Jones said, crowds of wealthy Chinese stood around two long felt tables playing "pique," a traditionally oriental gambling pastime using small ivory blocks something like dominoes. Gambling is illegal in all but a few cities in California, and then restricted to poker and panquinine parlors.

Authorities said stacks of $100 and $20 bills lay on the gambling tables when the officers walked in.

"All hell broke loose," Jones said.

When things eventually calmed down, no one was really sure whether Harry Wong ever did get installed as the Bk Tong's new president.

Schweser's Is Hit By Fire In Norfolk

Norfolk (AP) — A four-alarm fire caused extensive damage to Schweser's Department Store in the downtown Norfolk business district Sunday afternoon.

Firemen from Norfolk, Madison, Battle Creek and Hoskins battled the flames four hours before bringing them under control.

Fire Chief Larry Reeves said the cause of the blaze had not been determined and there was no dollar estimate of damage.

Firemen used gas masks to get close enough to fight the flames and it was necessary to use a Nebraska Public Power District boom truck to lift a fireman to a position above the roof, from where he could hose water on flames between a false ceiling and the roof.

A part of the roof in the eastern part of the building collapsed, sending clouds of smoke into the air.

The store was divided into men's and women's sections, with the men's department located in the eastern part, which sustained the most damage.

A two-story structure above the women's section to the west, which formerly housed the Norfolk Beauty College, was vacant and damage there apparently was minor.

The F. W. Woolworth store just east of Schweser's appared to have escaped damage.

All off-duty and reserve Norfolk police officers were called to the scene to close off the area and prevent possible looting.

The Schweser store manager, Wayne Benton, said it was not known if the building would be rebuilt.

Headquartered in Fremont, Schweser's has other stores in Fremont, Columbus, Hastings, Grand Island, Kearney and North Platte.

Thieves Net $1.4 Million In London

LONDON (AP) — Burglars broke into a West London post office under the noses of the police and stole cash, stamps and money orders officially listed as worth 600,000 pounds — about $1.4 million.

The raiders struck at Twickenham post office, which is down the road from a large police station.

The break-in was discovered Sunday morning and it took several hours to count the losses.

The raid was the second biggest on a post office in Britain since the Great Train Robbery in 1963 when about $6 million was snatched from a royal mail train ambushed north of London.

The previous second-biggest loss for a post office was in December 1969, when burglars escaped with about $1.22 million in cash, postage and social security stamps from a post office in the central London district of Mayfair.

Dental College Demonstrations Tuesday Night

Junior dental students and senior dental hygiene students will present the 1973 Table Clinic Program from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at the UNL college of Dentistry, 40th and Holdrege. The demonstrations on diagnosis, treatment or research related to dentistry are free and open to the public.

Models, casts and visual aids will be used to supplement the oral presentations. Each clinician must be able to make his presentation in 15 minutes and answer questions.

The judging by College of Dentistry Faculty, will be in two divisions, clinical and basic science.

The clinics will be in the basic science laboratories on the ground level of the Dental College Building, entered through the west door.

EVERYBODY'S MONEY:

Suggestions Are Offered To Curb Price Increases

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

Merryle Rukeyser

The clamor for a meat boycott constituted an outlet for pent up emotions growing out of resentment over runaway prices rather than a practical solution. In face of the current economic dislocations, it's not enough to become hot heads. Certainly nothing but frustration could result if the search for inflation scapegoates degenerated into internal class warefare among farmers, consumers and food merchants.

In order to minimize damage to family wellbeing, prudent persons in time of inflation don't freeze their life style, but make adjustments, such as shifting to less expensive cuts of meat, including use of the internal organs of the steer. The need for flexibility varies from household to household in accord with the availability of discretionary income. In any circumstances, the potentially corrective processes of a free competitive marketplace should not be impaired by economic freebootery.

To get down to he nitty gritty, in face of the abnormal surge of prices, the supermarket owner shouldn't stand still, and merely piously mouth tired phrases about supply and demand. So doing irritates the victims. Demand is admittedly at a new peak as a result of a combination of factors. With crop failures in Eastern Europe and China which have imported U.S. grains, domestic demand for food is at a new high because of peak personal incomes reflecting rising prosperity; and wider use of the food stamp program for low income groups has been evidenced.

Wasteful Practices

In light of the current price shock, it behooves those in the business of bringing food in retail stores to consumers to re-examine untenable long term wasteful practices. Chain-store operators would in public confidence by taking steps to rid the industry of expensive skullduggery and cost inflating commercial bribery, which sap retail food profit margins despite high selling prices. The time is ripe for frank disclosure of hidden, built-in illegitimate merchandising costs.

As a starter, top management should reappraise the integrity of their own purchasing agents to make sure that costs are not padded through under the table deals to collect kick backs from suppliers. This delicate and unpleasant task shouldn't be sidestepped.

Secondly, paradoxically, even some of the labor bosses who shout loudest about high food prices contribute to the situation by condoning the economic waste of feather bedding. Instead of jawboning about this, the federal government and the states should promptly revise their labor-management legislation, and provide that any union which inflates costs by supporting feather bedding, should lose their privileges under law.

Dishonesty Expensive

Thirdly, while in these days of consumerism, it is fashionable to assume that the customers can do no wrong, costs are dangerously expanded because of the dishonesty of a small percentage of patrons. Pilfering by kleptomaniacs and dishonest customers disgracefully pads costs, which are passed along to legitimate customers. Far stronger security measures should be applied.

Fourthly, management's improvement of security measures should be designed also to cut down pilfering by dishonest employes.

The pathology of current runaway food prices should be a clarion call to take a fresh hard look at traditional malpractices and economic leaks.

(Mr. Rukeyser will be pleased to receive inquiries from readers concerning their financial problems. Letters with stamped, self addressed envelopes should be sent in care of The Lincoln Star. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Others, to the extent time permits, will be handled by mail.)

Audubon Society Tours New Nature Sanctuary

A National Audubon Society member makes his way gingerly across a spring rivulet on a tour of the society's newly-acquired nature sanctuary along the Platte River near Gibbon. Establishment of the sanctuary was announced at a convention of the Nebraska Audubon chapters in Kearney over the weekend. Discussion of Platte River flora and fauna, the environmental effects of the proposed Mid-State Reclamation Project, and Audubon-proposed alternatives for the river were interspersed with a canoe trip and field viewing of the migrating sandhill cranes. (Star Photo.)

120 Gamblers Caught In Chinatown Raid

Los Angeles (UPI) — To spotters at the door, the two men looked like well-dressed, well-heeled patrons come to spend a night gambling in Chinatown. It was a mistake — they were vice squad cops.

What followed Saturday night was one of the biggest gambling raids staged in Chinatown in recent years, with an estimated 50 wealthy patrons ducking out back doors and windows.

The night began as a quiet installation dinner for cafe owner Harry Wong as head of the Bk Tong, but ended in an uproar about midnight when vice officers rounded up more than 120 men and woman who hadn't managed to find a door or window. Vice Squad Lt. James Jones said there were so many suspects that the auditorium at police headquarters had to be used to book them all.

Jones said the well-dressed guests, some with thousands of dollars in their pockets, filed into the Bing Kong Tong, the largest and most popular social hall in the city's dodnwotnw Chinese community.

Jones said he sent two modishly dressed officers to investigate, but recalled later that he didn't think his men could slip past the guards or the secret warning devices he felt sure were being used. When the officers turned up at the front door they were mistaken for guests and the door guard didn't bother to raise the alarm. Both men filed into the gambling room.

Inside, Jones said, crowds of wealthy Chinese stood around two long felt tables playing "pique," a traditionally oriental gambling pastime using small ivory blocks something like dominoes. Gambling is illegal in all but a few cities in California, and then restricted to poker and panquinine parlors.

Authorities said stacks of $100 and $20 bills lay on the gambling tables when the officers walked in.

"All hell broke loose," Jones said.

When things eventually calmed down, no one was really sure whether Harry Wong ever did get installed as the Bk Tong's new president.

Omaha Woman Shot To Death In Kansas City

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — An Omaha woman was shot to death late Saturday in a disturbance in a car parked on Interstate 29 in North Kansas City.

The victim was identified as Ruth Grizzard, 38. The other two occupants of the car told police that Mrs. Grizzard began stabbing them during an argument, whereupon one of them shot her with a .25-caliber automatic pistol. Both persons were arrested.

Selling Job Said Needed To Save Safety Program

By United Press International

Gov. J. J. Exon's top highway safety official said Sunday night an intensive "selling job" needs to be done among members of the Nebraska Legislature in order to salvage the administration's highway safety program.

Of the six bills authored by Exon's Highway Safety Advisory Committee, three have been killed, one approved and signed into law and two are pending legislative action.

John Sullivan, State Department of Motor Vehicles director, acknowledged that some senators are "very conscious" about traffic safety and are "really helping us."

"There are others we have failed to reach," Sullivan said. "We haven't gotten our message across. That's obvious. We've done a bad selling job to convince them of the seriousness of the situation."

Sullivan also cited a "small number" of lawmakers who would vote against a highway safety measure just because it came from the governor's office.

"Let's just call it a matter of personalities," said Sullivan, who declined to name the senators. "It's just obvious at times when they exhibit almost an irrational jealousy of having a strong governor.

"When personalities come to play, that's when the highway safety program begins to suffer," Sullivan added. "Whether they like it or not, the governor is in charge of the highway safety program.

"However, we still come back to those senators who don't see highway safety as an issue," he said in an interview with UPI in Omaha. "And that's our fault. We have darned good senators that we just haven't reached and tuned them in."

During the past 10 years in Nebraska, 4,316 persons have died and 178,138 have been injured in traffic mishaps. Alcohol was a key factor in at least a majority of those accidents, Sullivan said, and a bill which would have made the blood alcohol content tests mandatory for drivers involved in fatal accidents was killed by the Legislature's Agriculture Committee.

"I think placing it in the Agriculture Committee was a bad move," Sullivan said. "The bill had nothing to do with cows. The committee just didn't understand what we were asking for at all."

When the bill was killed, Sullivan said, "federal authorities just shook their heads. They couldn't believe it. Sixteen other states now have legislation of this type."

Other bills killed by the Legislature were one to lower the nighttime speed limit back to 60 miles per hour and another to suspend the driver's license for 30 days on convictions of going 15 miles per hour above the speed limit, or 90 miles per hour on the Interstate and 80 miles per hour on the state highway system.

State figures show, for example, that since the nighttime speed limit was increased in 1971, fatal accidents have increased 57%, fatalities 64% and injuries 17% in nighttime mishaps.

The driver's license suspension bill, Sullivan said, "wouldn't have been real critical to the driver. He could have lived with that. But it still might have gotten his attention focused on highway safety and squared around his driving habits."

"I thought for sure that bill was going to be approved," Sullivan said.

Still pending is legislation to make the reporting of drunken driving convictions mandatory and a 30-day suspension of a dirver's license if the holder is convicted of drunk driving, unless the court can submit a probationary plan that's basically in conformity with one approved by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

If the court failed to submit a suitable probation plan for the convicted, which Sullivan said would "be very strict and structured" the driver's license would remain suspended. Convictions now call for a $100 fine and probation.

At present, Sullivan said the state has no means of tallying the number of times a driver has been convicted of driving while intoxicated.

"This is the number one glaring error in our laws," Sullivan said, "and a must piece of legislation. Right now, a person who runs through a stop sign theoritically has a worse driving record than the guy who gets drunk and hits seven cars because the stop sign violations are recorded."

The lone bill to be approved and signed by Exon is the habitual offender law. It would revoke a license for three years if the driver has been convicted of losing his license twice in a five year period.

Sullivan said the state could lose 10% of its federal highway funds if the U.S. government determines Nebraska has a below par highway safety program.

"We haven't received any direct threat that the government would do this. It's just a fact that we live with," Sullivan said. "Nebraska by and large has moved very well as far as getting into line with federal standards.

"But to obtain a good and effective highway safety program," he emphasized, "we can't have anything less than full cooperation from the Legislature."

Political Prisoners Released In Somalia

Mogadishu, Somalia (AP) — The Somali National Security Court has released 18 members of the civilian regime overthrown by the revolutionary armed forces on Oct. 21, 1969. Six others, including former Prime Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Egal and former Interior Minister Yassin Noor Hassan, are to remain in detention pending legal proceedings.

Selling Job Said Needed To Save Safety Program

By United Press International

Gov. J. J. Exon's top highway safety official said Sunday night an intensive "selling job" needs to be done among members of the Nebraska Legislature in order to salvage the administration's highway safety program.

Of the six bills authored by Exon's Highway Safety Advisory Committee, three have been killed, one approved and signed into law and two are pending legislative action.

John Sullivan, State Department of Motor Vehicles director, acknowledged that some senators are "very conscious" about traffic safety and are "really helping us."

"There are others we have failed to reach," Sullivan said. "We haven't gotten our message across. That's obvious. We've done a bad selling job to convince them of the seriousness of the situation."

Sullivan also cited a "small number" of lawmakers who would vote against a highway safety measure just because it came from the governor's office.

"Let's just call it a matter of personalities," said Sullivan, who declined to name the senators. "It's just obvious at times when they exhibit almost an irrational jealousy of having a strong governor.

"When personalities come to play, that's when the highway safety program begins to suffer," Sullivan added. "Whether they like it or not, the governor is in charge of the highway safety program.

"However, we still come back to those senators who don't see highway safety as an issue," he said in an interview with UPI in Omaha. "And that's our fault. We have darned good senators that we just haven't reached and tuned them in."

During the past 10 years in Nebraska, 4,316 persons have died and 178,138 have been injured in traffic mishaps. Alcohol was a key factor in at least a majority of those accidents, Sullivan said, and a bill which would have made the blood alcohol content tests mandatory for drivers involved in fatal accidents was killed by the Legislature's Agriculture Committee.

"I think placing it in the Agriculture Committee was a bad move," Sullivan said. "The bill had nothing to do with cows. The committee just didn't understand what we were asking for at all."

When the bill was killed, Sullivan said, "federal authorities just shook their heads. They couldn't believe it. Sixteen other states now have legislation of this type."

Other bills killed by the Legislature were one to lower the nighttime speed limit back to 60 miles per hour and another to suspend the driver's license for 30 days on convictions of going 15 miles per hour above the speed limit, or 90 miles per hour on the Interstate and 80 miles per hour on the state highway system.

State figures show, for example, that since the nighttime speed limit was increased in 1971, fatal accidents have increased 57%, fatalities 64% and injuries 17% in nighttime mishaps.

The driver's license suspension bill, Sullivan said, "wouldn't have been real critical to the driver. He could have lived with that. But it still might have gotten his attention focused on highway safety and squared around his driving habits."

"I thought for sure that bill was going to be approved," Sullivan said.

Still pending is legislation to make the reporting of drunken driving convictions mandatory and a 30-day suspension of a dirver's license if the holder is convicted of drunk driving, unless the court can submit a probationary plan that's basically in conformity with one approved by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

If the court failed to submit a suitable probation plan for the convicted, which Sullivan said would "be very strict and structured" the driver's license would remain suspended. Convictions now call for a $100 fine and probation.

At present, Sullivan said the state has no means of tallying the number of times a driver has been convicted of driving while intoxicated.

"This is the number one glaring error in our laws," Sullivan said, "and a must piece of legislation. Right now, a person who runs through a stop sign theoritically has a worse driving record than the guy who gets drunk and hits seven cars because the stop sign violations are recorded."

The lone bill to be approved and signed by Exon is the habitual offender law. It would revoke a license for three years if the driver has been convicted of losing his license twice in a five year period.

Sullivan said the state could lose 10% of its federal highway funds if the U.S. government determines Nebraska has a below par highway safety program.

"We haven't received any direct threat that the government would do this. It's just a fact that we live with," Sullivan said. "Nebraska by and large has moved very well as far as getting into line with federal standards.

"But to obtain a good and effective highway safety program," he emphasized, "we can't have anything less than full cooperation from the Legislature."

Political Prisoners Released In Somalia

Mogadishu, Somalia (AP) — The Somali National Security Court has released 18 members of the civilian regime overthrown by the revolutionary armed forces on Oct. 21, 1969. Six others, including former Prime Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Egal and former Interior Minister Yassin Noor Hassan, are to remain in detention pending legal proceedings.

March Dry In Tokyo

Tokyo (AP) — The meteorological Agency said 1973 brought Tokyo its dryest March since the start of the century, with only four inches of precipitation.

GRAIN DRYERS
7 main reasons why in the years ahead you will be happy that your PTO drive batch dryer is a MORIDGE

* Steel shaft drive in place of belts
* Recirculating for positive uniform drying
* Optional 3 speed transmission provides for handling beans gently
* Much much steeper hopper for easy grain flow (No forcing arms needed)
* Grain regulator arms slow moving sweep above steep hopper This only to insure no wet spots holding up free flow Insures every kernel recirculated Prevents grain damage
* Dual fan blades deliver enough additional air to run at only 420 RPM tractor speed Less noise — less wear smaller tractor operating at only ⅝ throttle
* Trained Nebraska service department Complete service parts in stock

Moridge with 15 years dryer manufacturing experience brings you these plus features at lower prices

Display lot on Highway 6 2 miles NE of Lincoln Dryers moving in and out constantly Reserve yours now while ASC financing is available

GRAIN DRYERS
7 main reasons why, in the years ahead, you will be happy that your PTO drive batch dryer is a MORIDGE
* Steel shaft drive in place of belts
* Recirculating for positive uniform drying.
* Optional 3 speed transmission provides for handling beans gently.
* Much, much steeper hopper for easy grain flow. (No forcing arms needed)
* Grain regulator arms, slow moving, sweep above steep hopper. Ths only to insure no wet spots holding up free flow. Insures every kernel recirculated. Prevents grain damage.
* Dual fan blades deliver enough additional air to run at only 420 RPM tractor speed. Less noise — less wear, smaller tractor operating at only ⅝ throttle.
* Trained Nebraska service department. Complete service parts in stock.
Moridge, with 15 years dryer manufacturing experience bring you these plus features at lower prices.
Display lot on Highway 6, 2 miles NE of Lincoln. Dryers moving in and out constantly. Reserve yours now while ASC financing is available.

pick a part.
We've got a computer-inventoried warehouse full of them. Genuine Chevrolet parts to fix almost any car rolling. And the computer tells where each one is. It's like having instant parts. If we don't have exactly what's needed, there's our Telex parts ordering system. It can locate any part needed in minutes. Why do we go to all this trouble to get parts for you? It's part of Misle's program of total service satisfaction. We do a better job with the right parts on hand. And we get your car back faster.

"Remember how he ranted and raved when I started wearing boots—well, Carol, that was NOTHING!"

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 4-2
